INDICATED WISH FOR MILITARY ALLIANCE

Labour Attacks
War Minister

SIMON MAKES DENIAL

London, June 29.

The speeches by Mr. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on June 10, forecasting the dropping of sanctions, and of Mr. A. Duff Cooper, Minister of War, in Paris on June 24, in which he said, inter alia, that France's frontiers were "our" frontiers, were the bones of contention in the House of Commons to-day, when the Labourites obtained the Speaker's leave to hold an emergency debate. The House was crowded.

Mr. C. R. Attlee, Labour leader, criticised the absence of Mr. Baldwin, who is resting for a few days in the country. Arguing that Ministers had no right to make individual statements outside the House on high matters of public policy, Mr. Attlee, while sympathising with the need for Anglo-French friendship, bitterly criticised passages in Mr. Duff Cooper's speech, which he said, had been interpreted to indicate a desire for a close Anglo-French military alliance, which conflicted with the Government policy.

"It is time Mr. Baldwin came to the House and plainly announced the Government policy, and that thereafter Ministers control their voices," declared Mr. Attlee.

SPEECH ALTERED?

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, expressed the opinion that Mr. Duff Cooper's speech marked the Government's inability of purpose, lowered British prestige and endangered peace. Mr. Winston Churchill said he understood that the first draft of Mr. Duff Cooper's speech was seen by Mr. Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, and was altered. Mr. Churchill thought it was an excellent speech, of admirable sentiment, without casting any aspersions on any other country, unless the latter harboured aggressive intentions. Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, replying, firmly denied that Mr. Duff Cooper advocated a military alliance, and said the Opposition's statements were based on a "false premise."

POINTED QUERIES

London, June 29.
Attention was called in the Commons this afternoon to recent speeches by Ministers. Questions were addressed to the Prime Minister, asking whether the speech delivered in Paris on June 24 by the Secretary for War represented the policy of the Government, and whether in regard to this speech and the recent pronouncement on sanctions, by the

ZIONCHECK RETURNS TO CAPITOL

AFTER ESCAPING
FROM ASYLUM MYSTERIOUS MOVEMENTS

Washington, June 29.

Congressman Zioncheck, the eccentric member of the House of Representatives, who has been under observation by psychiatrists following his series of escapades in the capital, was found sleeping peacefully to-day in the office of the House of Representatives, after he had escaped from a mental home in Maryland and driven to Washington. He refused to answer the telephone and ordered food from the Sergeant-at-Arms. He has been offered safe conduct out of the district—for a summons to appear before a Lunacy Court awaits him in Washington—if he will return to Seattle. Later in the morning, Capitol police escorted Zioncheck from the Representatives' building to an undisclosed destination. It is possible he is going to Seattle.—United Press.

ITALY SENDS HER TERMS TO ASSEMBLY

Past Condemnation Unwarranted

BENEFICENT ACTIVITY IN ETHIOPIA

Geneva, June 29.

The latest Italian note will be communicated to the new President of the League of Nations Assembly to-morrow.

The note rejects the League's condemnation of Italy in her Ethiopian adventure as unwarranted. It draws a parallel between Italy's beneficent activities in Ethiopia with those exercised by mandatory powers under the Versailles Treaty.

Italy denies that she has any intention of exploiting the natives of Ethiopia and declared an "open door" policy will be maintained.

The document expresses Italy's readiness henceforth to act in the League in the sense and spirit of European co-operation, but she first awaits the lifting of sanctions and the dissolution of defensive groups, born from the application of sanctions, expressing that true collaboration cannot be built without mutual confidence.—Reuter.

League Has No Responsibility

Geneva, June 29.

The report that Italy has proposed what is described as a revolutionary mandate over Ethiopia is most misleading, official quarters here declared to-day.

Italy has apparently offered to furnish the League of Nations with reports of her civilising efforts in Ethiopia, but without any form of control being recognised to-day by the report that the September meeting of the League Assembly might be adjourned until October, or even later, to enable the powers to deal with the problem of the Locarno Treaty crisis, following the receipt of the German reply to Great Britain's request for elucidation of points in Herr Adolf Hitler's compromise peace plan.

However, Britain and French circles state that the idea is to postpone the meeting only for eight or ten days, as a matter of convenience.—Reuter.

Troops Returning

Rome, June 29.

Large numbers of troops are being brought back from East Africa. They include the whole of the Gavianna Division, about 20,000 men, artillery, a group of Blackshirts, a battalion of University students and a regiment of the Pelosiana Division.

The returning soldiers are all receiving bonuses and will be given a reception resembling the old Roman triumphs when they land in Naples Wednesday.

They will have a similar reception in Rome where Signor Mussolini himself will probably greet the warriors.—Reuter Special.

Two British Constables Badly Hurt

Jerusalem, June 29.

Three British constables were wounded, two seriously, when a police patrol, mounted on a trolley and guarding the railway from Afula to Beisan, was twice ambushed last night.

The first attack the constables repulsed, but in the second, near Beisan, they met with a very heavy fire and retreated with determination.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

REASSURING VIEW

London, June 29.

A more reassuring view of the Transjordan situation is now taken in Whitehall and the Government has every confidence that the Emir Abdullah will maintain control of his subjects and that threatened trouble there among the Arabs will be averted.—Reuter Special.

ETHIOPIA GUERRILLAS BOMBED CONCENTRATION IN HARRAR AREA

SPREADING REVOLT

(Special To "Telegraph")

London, July 29.

The Daily Telegraph's Djibouti correspondent reports guerilla warfare has broken out again in Ethiopia.

He said that Italian war planes had bombed several thousand warriors massed near Harrar.—United Press.

Tribesmen Revolt

London, June 29.

The Ethiopian Minister in London, M. Martin, states he has received a letter from Ethiopia which states that Italy is trying to induce Ethiopian youths to become Italian soldiers. It is also stated that the natives outside Addis Ababa, and in other outlying districts, have revolted, and that they would launch a concerted attack on the Italians when the rain begins.

M. Martin added that after the fall of Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian tribesmen had captured Dessie, but could not hold the town owing to the heavy aerial bombardment by the Italians.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

LEAVE WAITS ON LEAGUE

NAVY STANDS BY TO SANCTIONS' END

London, June 29.

In reply to a question in the House of Commons as to whether there had been any changes in the disposition and bases of the Mediterranean Fleet as a result of the plan to raise sanctions, Lord Stanley, Parliament's Secretary, said the question of raising of sanctions depended upon the decision of the League, by whom it was now being considered.

Until a decision had actually been reached no important changes in disposition of the Fleet could be made, but as soon as a return to normal conditions was possible it was the intention of the Admiralty to arrange for those officers and men who had leave overdue to them to receive it.—British Wireless.

CHINESE BEAT JAPANESE ANOTHER INCIDENT IN NORTH CHINA

Peiping, June 30.

Still another Sino-Japanese incident is reported, this time from Fengtai, and authorities forecast a protest and demands from Japan as a consequence.

Japanese sources report that yesterday a Japanese and Korean, visiting Fengtai, were set upon by some of General Sung Cheh-yuan's soldiers.

The Japanese was manhandled and held prisoner for some considerable time, while the Korean took to his heels and escaped the soldiery.—Reuter.

Peiping Brawl

Peiping, June 30.

The head of the Japanese Hospital here, testifying yesterday in the case of the Japanese officer, Kisaku Sasaki, of the Manchukuo Department of Defence, who was allegedly killed in a fight with British soldiers here, said it was his opinion that the fracture of Sasaki's skull was caused by some blunt instrument and could not have been inflicted by a naked fist.

A Japanese shop-keeper, a friend of Sasaki's said that he was going home on the night Sasaki was fatally hurt, when he heard a cry and saw two British soldiers chase a running man. He thought it was an ordinary street brawl and so continued on his way.

Later, Sasaki arrived outside his home in a rickshaw, groaning, and accompanied by a Japanese friend. Witness advised the friend to take Sasaki to hospital, and Sasaki died shortly after his arrival there.—Reuter.

Two British soldiers, H. Cooke and R. Hunt were examined several days ago for alleged participation in disturbances on the night of May 26, at a cabaret, when Sasaki was injured.

Han Fu-Chu Remains

Nanking, June 30.

General Han Fu-chu has not resigned, according to official information.

LEGION'S EXECUTIONER CONFESSES MURDER

Detroit, June 29.

Dayton Dean, the Black Legion's self-confessed "executioner," to-day pleaded guilty to kidnapping and murdering at least one man against whom the Black Legion had a score to settle.

Judge Joseph Moynihan accepted the plea, and referred the case to the Probation Department. Mrs. Castle's son James, seven years of age, awoke at midnight and saw the masked killer beating his mother's head with a brick. But he thought it was a nightmare and went to sleep again.—United Press.

DROUGHT RUINING GRAINMEN

MILLIONS LOST IN U.S. STATES

INSECTS' RAVAGES

Chicago, June 29.

A United Press survey of the damage done by insects and drought, in eighteen States reveals losses of, at least $100,000,000.

The double menace has spread over a triangular area bordered by the Ohio and Missouri rivers from the Canadian border southward as far as the Mississippi, and westward as far as Rocky Mountains. Heavy losses are also reported from the south-east.

However, the recent rains have replenished the parched soil and reduced the number of insects. Rains have also alleviated the drought in the Central Canadian wheat belt leaving the North-west to combat the scourge of grasshoppers and crickets and to literally pray for rain.

The insects, mostly grasshoppers, are most serious in Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and Oklahoma, even eating clothes and gnawing chunks out of pitchfork handles.

In Wyoming and Colorado the rainfall has been only one-third of normal, while in Dakota there have been only a few light showers in the last two months. In Montana the wheat grew to a height of two feet and then withered.

In many quarters, the pastures are completely burned out, forcing the stock men to ship their cattle outside the area in order to obtain feed.—United Press.

MURPHY TO CONTEST ELECTION

IF FRIENDS HAVE THEIR WAY

GOVERNORSHIP OF MICHIGAN

Washington, June 29.

Observers here to-day saw indications that Mr. Frank Murphy, former Governor of the Philippine Islands, might yield to his friends' importunities and seek the Governorship of Michigan state, following conferences with President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Although he sought to avoid political questions, Mr. Murphy admitted, when interviewed, that he would make a decision with respect to the gubernatorial election within the next four or five days.

"I have discussed the Michigan situation thoroughly with the President," he said.

He drew attention to the fact that he would not return to the Philippines if he decides to run for the governorship of Michigan, but he also made it clear that conferences with the President to-day had been mainly concerned with important Philippine problems, requiring early action, and which would be discussed at Washington during the next few days, he added.

If Mr. Murphy decides to run—and there is a feeling in White House circles that he will—observers draw attention to his popularity, which will tend to draw to the Democratic ticket much strength lying at present in the camp of Father Coughlin. It is recalled that, up to now, Mr. Murphy has been the active support of Father Coughlin.

Mr. Murphy, questioned as to Michigan's political leanings, merely remarked: "The President will carry Michigan in November."—United Press.

COURIERS SMUGGLE MONEY TO GERMANY

Morecambe, June 24.
BEHIND the revelations of Mr. J. C. Little at the Engineers' Conference at Morecambe yesterday that a group of German trade unionists were planning the overthrow of Hitler lies a fascinating story of a new international secret service.

The full story was told exclusively to-night by Mr. Little, who, in addition to being president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, is chairman of the International Metal Workers' Federation.

Mr. Little explained how, a year ago, this secret service was formed. When former German trade union leaders began their recruitment, only trusted members of works committees, corresponding to shop stewards in the English industrial system, were selected. Each was

"The organisers have to guard against the German authorities arresting one of the workers in the international service, torturing him, and extracting confessions incriminating others," remarked Mr. Little.

COLLECTING FUNDS

"Two international collecting committees have been formed. One has headquarters in Paris, and the other in New York. In Paris the committee includes nine or ten Germans, two Frenchmen, and an American.

"Funds collected from trade unions and individual subscribers in many countries, including Great Britain, France, United States, Italy, and Spain are forwarded to the distributing committee.

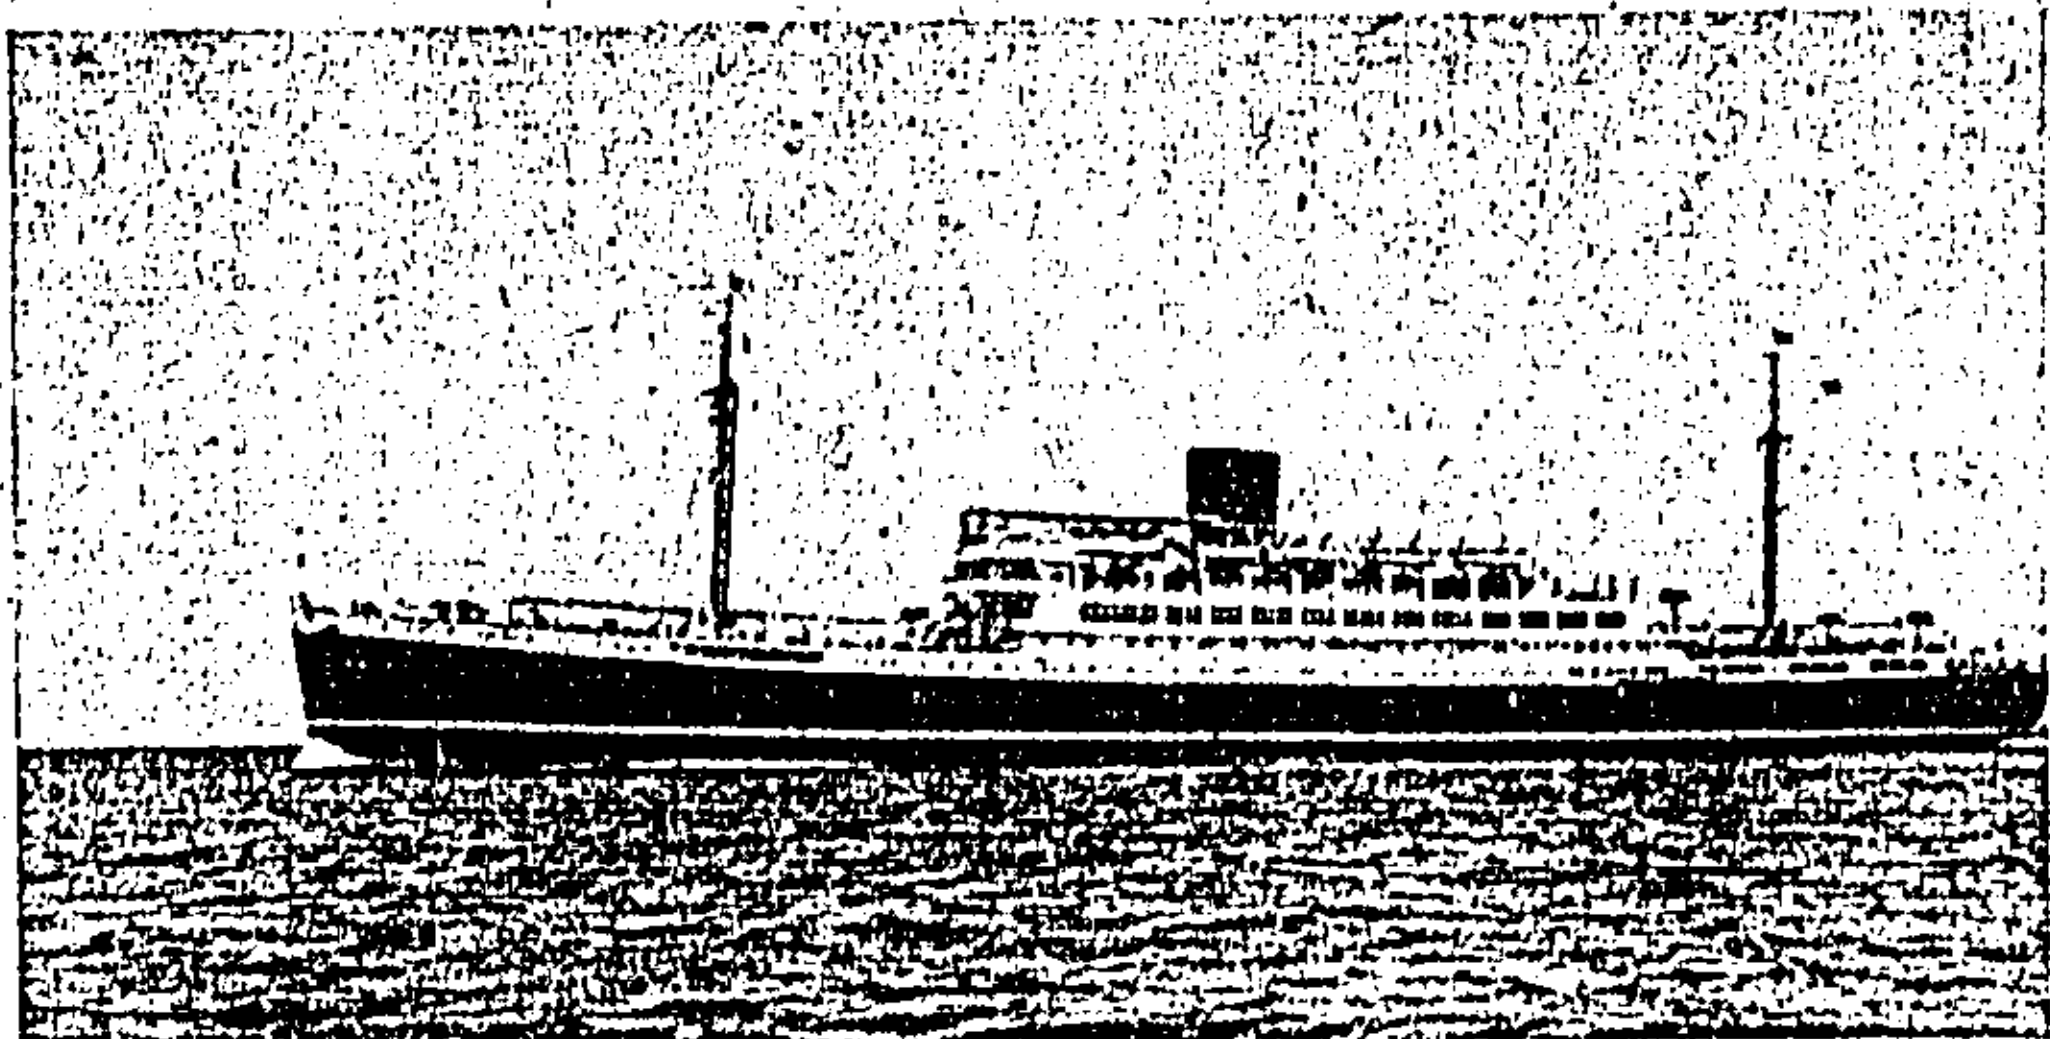

"This committee hands over large sums of money to two couriers, who smuggle the funds into Germany, and then link up with a numbered agent in the Berlin chain."

"The German authorities," added Mr. Little, "know that £15,000 was distributed among supporters in Berlin alone last Christmas.

"Arrangements are being made to extend the operations of these agents outside Berlin.

"The frantic efforts of the German authorities to stamp out this secret service," declared Mr. Little, "is indicated by the arrest of 600 persons in one Berlin suburb."

1886-1936 : Fifty years of shipping in the Far East

Above.—A recent photograph of the new N.D.L. liner Poladam, now on the Far Eastern Service. Right.—The first N.D.L. liner to visit Hong-kong. The steamer Oder arrived here in 1886.

THE existence of the N.D.L. goes back as far as 1857, when enterprising Bremen merchants, after small beginnings in river-shipping on the Weser, founded the NDL as over-sea shipping company plying between Europe and America.

During the first thirty years of the development, when many a setback had to be overcome, the N.D.L. already extended its services—especially to America. As early as 1878 the first express steamers—which at that time had still to be built in England—were put into operation, vessels, which in those years were ranking in the first place of international shipping.

In 1882 the N.D.L. could look back on 25 years of existence, when their fleet consisted of almost hundred vessels totalling 100,000 B.R.T.

New prospects for a considerable extension of its shipping lines arose in the middle of the eighties, when the Reichs-entrusted Fuert Bismarck to arrive at an agreement with a German shipping line for a regular Imperial mailsteamer-service to the Far East and Australia. The agreement entered into with the N.D.L. was—at that time—to hold good for 15 years. On June 30th 1886 the first Imperial mailsteamer "Oder" (see picture) was commissioned for the Far East, leaving from Bremerhaven, in the presence of many Government officials and deputies of merchants and industrialists. The s.s. "Oder," although a ship of relative small size, judged by modern stan-all, only in home coast shipping. Gradually the fleet could be increased by smaller new constructions and re-purchases of former German ships, and with these the services were taken up again on the most important routes. The Far East service was inaugurated again in March 1922 by the freighter "Hermann", which was followed by further monthly sailings. Beginning in January of the following year, an interim passenger-freight service was opened with the s.s. "Weser" and "Werra", which in 1923 were joined by the 4 vessels of the "Saarbruecken" type and the pre-war mail steamer "Derflinger". In addition to the existing fortnightly mail steamer service with passenger vessels, a regular freight service already in 1914 was taken up, and it is for this reason that after the war the main attention was directed to the freight service, suitable of all owing to the fact that suitable vessels for the passenger trade were not available. From the beginning of 1928 freight vessels, of only an elderly type were on the Far East; however, in February of that year the type of the freighters was considerably improved by inauguration of the express-freighter "Lahn." Another ten steamers and three motor-vessels of this type were added to the fleet. From the course of the next years, and all these vessels have proven to be a great success.

dards, received not only a cordial welcome at the Far Eastern ports she visited but was, moreover, an object of rather particular interests, seeing that she was the first ship on the Far Eastern run to have what was at that time something very much out of the ordinary—the electric light.

IN the beginning of the 20th century this service was operated by the vessels of the "Feldheim" type such as s.s. "Zieten," "Seydlitz," "Roon" and "Scharnhorst," which later on were followed by a somewhat

The then following new Far East steamers were some of the first larger vessels ever to be built in Germany.

THE problem which the Im-

Special Mail Service to the Far East—and with it a similar service to Australia—set the Norddeutscher Lloyd, was by no means a simple one, since it called upon them to embody in their service two parts of the earth, with which they had not maintained regular connections prior to the year 1886. However, thanks to the help of a number of their Agencies abroad they succeeded in doing so, and it is interesting to know that the those very agencies, are still in existence, after serving the Company for fifty years; they are the following: Messrs. Freudenberg & Co. (The Hanseatic Trading Co.), of Ceylon; Messrs. Behn, Meyer & Co., of Singapore; Messrs. Melchers & Co., of Hamburg. ★ ★ ★

THROUGH the war and the dictate of Versailles, Germany lost all her sea-going ships, and not earlier than 1921 a start could again be made on a very small scale, first to

SINCE everything necessary for the modernisation of the freight service had been done by putting these vessels into commission, the out-of-date type of the "Siam brauckee" class was felt to hamper the passenger trade and means had to be found to build new ships which would meet present-day requirements of first class passenger vessels. Years went by without any substantial improvement, only with the prospering of Germany under the National Socialist Regime it was possible to bring up new initiative and courage resulting in the three express liners "Scharnhorst", "Potsdam" and "Gneisenau", which are already popular amongst passengers as well as shippers. These vessels represent a type which will for a long time answer all requirements of up-to-date passenger and freight traffic between the Far East and Europe.

The Celebrations of the 25th Anniversary of Bremen are shared by Melchers & Co., China, who have been Agents for the Line since the last 50 years.

THROUGH the war and the dictate of Versailles, Germany lost all her sea-going ships, and not earlier than 1921 a start could again be made on a very small scale, first of

Anglo-Soviet Entente Nearing Realisation

STRONGER RELATIONS TO OFFSET FAR EAST "MENACE"

Washington, June 21.

STRENGTHENING of relations between Great Britain and Soviet Russia, each believing its interests to be menaced by Japanese expansion in the Far East, is pointed to by diplomatic observers as one of the most interesting moves in the world's political chess game.

According to reliable reports, private British bankers, acting with the knowledge of the foreign office, have nearly completed negotiations for a direct loan to the Soviet government. Although the British previously have granted Russia credits, it is understood this will be the first actual loan to be arranged between London and Moscow. Receipts of the loan will be used primarily to purchase goods in the British market.

At the same time, the British government is opening negotiations to draw Russia into the London Naval pact, already signed by the United States, Britain and France. The treaty, while not limiting the number of ships—except heavy cruisers—which a nation may build, does restrict the tonnage of individual vessels. More, it provides for a full and frank exchange of information between the powers as to their yearly building programmes.

If, as expected, Russia does subscribe to the treaty, it will have a significance deeper than would appear on the surface. The Russians for years have been extraordinarily secretive about their naval programme.

Foreign naval attaches in Moscow have been unable to obtain anything but the most general information about the Soviet's strength on the seas.

Several times during the last two years commissars of war Klement Voroshilov has spoken mysteriously of the Soviet's naval programme, indicating it was centred around destroyers and submarines, but he has never given any definite figures. Thus, if Russia consents to exchange naval information with Great Britain, France and the United States, it will mean that she regards them as a bloc of friendly powers. Russian relations with France, of course, are cemented by the recently ratified pact of mutual assistance. Further, the fact that the British agreed to undertake the negotiations with Russia on behalf of the conference powers indicates to observers that Anglo-Russian relations have grown much warmer since the days of the Metro-Vickers trial of 1933 when the two states nearly broke off relations.

Fear of Japan's growing power in China is believed to be the motivating force behind the new cordiality between London and Moscow. Russia, of course, has felt its interests menaced ever since Japanese soldiers advanced north of the Nani river into the Soviet's sphere of influence in Manchuria late in 1931. Britain, on the other hand, has been the traditional friend of Japan and, contrarily, the ancient enemy of Russia.

The British appeared not to be unduly concerned when Japanese troops marched into Manchuria. But their recent occupation of North China, where the British have extensive interests, combined with restrictions the Japanese have placed on foreign trade in Manchuria, appear to have alarmed London.

ECONOMIC PENETRATION—Further fear has been thrown into the hearts of "city" men in London by Japanese penetration with cheap, quick selling goods into the Indian market, once a British monopoly.

These factors are, in the view of diplomatic observers, working to draw Russia and Great Britain into friendlier relations than they have enjoyed since the revolution. No one expects an alliance, but the possibility of Great Britain joining in some arrangement like the Franco-Soviet pact of mutual assistance is not excluded. —United Press.

SECRET BURIAL AT 'ABODE OF LOVE'

SMYTH-PIGOTT'S WIDOW

Taunton, June 8.
WITH impressive rites held in great secrecy Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, widow of John Hugh Smyth-Pigott, the former leader of the Agapemonites sect, was buried at the sect's "Abode of Love" at Spaxton, near here, today.

All who took part in the ceremony were sworn to secrecy, but a villager whose work entitles him to enter the closely guarded gates said that the burial was carried out with elaborate ritual.

Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, who was 85 and had been in ill-health for some time, was buried in the private cemetery in the grounds, where, with similar honours, her husband was buried in 1927.

The burial was preceded by a service in the private chapel conducted by the present principal of the colony, Mr. Douglas Hamilton, a Scotsman. Smyth-Pigott was a clergyman of the Church of England who was unfrocked for immorality. When he was pastor of the Agapemonite church at Clapton in 1902 he made the startling announcement that he was the "Messiah."

MOBBED BY CROWDS—Crowds mobbed him outside the church and he was forced to retire to the "Abode of Love" which had been founded by James Henry Prince.

With him went his legal wife and Sister Ruth, an attractive young woman who was styled his spiritual bride and to whom three children were born. She also is buried in the grounds at Spaxton.

Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, formerly Miss Catherine Reynolds, was the sister of the Rev. A. P. Reynolds, formerly vicar of Kingsley, Cheshire, and now living in the Isle of Arran. She married Smyth-Pigott in 1886.

There are now about 70 members of the sect at the "Abode of Love," most of them women. There have been few new recruits to the faith in recent years. The oldest member, Mrs. Eleanor Giles, aged 101, died in February, and she was buried in part of the village churchyard reserved for the sect.

TRAITORS SENTENCED

Berlin, June 24.
Two traitors have received heavy sentences from the People's Court for seeking information for a foreign Power on the strength of the German forces in East Prussia and Silesia.

Herbert Prouss, of Tilsit, was sentenced to life penal servitude and Max Wittich, of Neisse, to 10 years' penal servitude. —Exchange.

The Brothers, but had refused to surrender certain documents concerning them pending the consent of the Pope, which had already been asked for by the Bishop of Trier.

The judge stated that Steinhoff must be guilty in over 100 cases. He had abused his high office and brought disgrace on State and Church.

The charges against others of the accused comprise attempted murder, seduction, brutality and offences against weak-minded and infirm persons. —Reuter.

ROOSEVELT AS PRESIDENT

Only Man who can Carry on Party Programme

Philadelphia, June 24.
Nomination of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, thirty-second president of the United States, as candidate of the Democratic party for a second term in the White House, was consistent with both partisan and national political situation.

Within his party, President Roosevelt by aggressive leadership and systematic organisation efforts, had established a personal control probably without precedent among Democratic chief executives of the last half-century.

After 1934, he had better than two-thirds majority in both the House of Representatives and the Senate. James A. Farley, labouring simultaneously as Postmaster-general and chairman of the Democratic National committee, built a powerful political machine committed to the support of President Roosevelt.

PARTY OPPOSITION—The serious intra-party opposition to his control came from relative conservative elements which thought the "New Deal" economic policies were inconsistent with the history of the Democratic party and the platform pledges of 1932.

Pre-convention tests of the party sentiment indicated that Democrats of this opinion were in the minority.

Political tradition has decreed that an incumbent president shall be given an opportunity to run for a second term. This traditional claim was strengthened when primary elections in many states gave a strong party mandate for President Roosevelt.

From a national standpoint, it was logical that President Roosevelt should be named by the Democrats to seek re-election. Probably no peace-time President ever faced more acute or varied economic and social problems.

Although the solution of these problems was frequently of controversial method or result, friend and foe conceded to the White House occupant an extraordinary energy and determination and a first-rate capacity as a political strategist.

BANKING CRISIS—President Roosevelt entered the White House March 4, 1933, when the country was in the midst of a severe banking crisis. On the next day he proclaimed a national banking holiday, and commenced a series of extraordinary emergency measures which stayed the panic and gave to his administration an extraordinary impetus of popular confidence and political support.

Congress granted President Roosevelt broad emergency powers with respect to money and banking, and very flexible enabling acts affecting industry and agriculture. Within a year there developed a system of new executive agencies, such as the National Recovery Administration, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the Public Works Administration and the Farm Credit Administration, of which the administration involved a high degree of control by executive branch of the government and the expenditure of loan of huge sums of money.

These vast social and economic operations came to be known as the "New Deal." Their sponsors held them to have inaugurated a new era of economic recovery and social welfare; their critics alleged that the country was threatened with "dictatorship" or "Fascism" and that the prospective great budget deficits were dangerous.

Congressional and state elections in the autumn of 1934 were regarded an endorsement of the Democratic Government. Therefore the most significant opposition to the President's programme developed in the courts rather than in Congress.

SUPREME COURT—The Supreme Court of the United States battered the "New Deal" with a series of negative decisions in 1935 and early 1936. These left the monetary programme little changed, but struck down the immense industrial codes programme of the National Recovery Administration and the Commodities Adjustment programme of the Agricultural Administration.

Supreme Court decisions provoked varying political reactions with some sentiment for revision of the Constitution to give the federal government intra-state powers. Narrow construction given to inter-state commerce clause in the N.R.A. decision was inconvenient for the "New Deal," but public opinion apparently not ready for a major change in the Constitution.

Public approval of the "New Deal" policies appeared to wane in the late autumn and winter of 1936, chiefly due to dissatisfaction in New England and great Eastern financial and manufacturing centres. The President's personal popularity, test polls of opinion indicated, exceeded that of his programme, and was reported to gain strength early in 1936.

Threatened opposition to President Roosevelt's leadership within the party made little headway and his triumph in the National Convention at Philadelphia was a foregone conclusion. —United Press.

MONK'S AMAZING CONFESSION IMMORAL CONDUCT CHARGE AGAINST 276

Coblentz, June 24.

A monk's confession that he had led a double life since 1929 and had seduced minors who came to him for lessons and confessions, as well as other members of his Order, was the feature of the mass trial which opened here to-day of 276 members of the Franciscan Order.

The monks, who belong to a number of monasteries in Westphalia and the Rhineland, are charged with immoral offences.

They are being tried in small batches and it is anticipated that the proceedings will last several months.

Sixty-one other Franciscans escaped arrest by leaving the country.

After formal evidence had been given to-day the proceedings were continued in camera, although the Press were admitted.

"DEEPLY PENITENT"—The first prisoner heard was the 46-year-old monk Bernhard Steinhoff, known as Brother Leonigill, who was charged with 12 cases of immoral conduct. Steinhoff said that he confessed to everything, and was deeply penitent.

Brother Robert Ankerter, who gave evidence, said that since 1929 he had been the secretary of the Franciscan Brotherhood.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY

New York, June 29.

Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Dow
Jones summary of yesterday's markets:—The market to-day was irregular, featured by the strength of Chrysler shares on heavy buying by London and Detroit traders, coupled with rumors that the stocks will be split up three for one. The weakness of steel issues, which traders unloaded, was due to indications that the industry is facing a hard fight on unions. Mercantile, mail-order and sugar stocks advanced, but utility shares declined slightly. Commodity issues were mixed. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregularly higher.

S. C. & F. New York office cables:
Stocks: The market moved mean-ingly, but the underlying remaining firm. The Times Business Index is 102.4 for the past week as against 100.9 the previous week.

Cotton: It was announced that the Government will continue its sales of "spot" cotton until July 20th.
Prices declined only moderately following the Government announcement. This is construed as evidence of the soundness of the market and a ready absorption of these Government sales is expected. Trade price-fixing to-day took offerings of futures.
Wheat: The effect of the week-end rains was outweighed by continued high temperatures, further discouraging crop reports and a decrease of 1,452,000 bushels in the visible supply when an increase had been expected.
A forecast of the weather indicates fair and cooler conditions. The visible supply of wheat under contract shows a decrease of 4,269,000 bushels.
The visible supply of corn has increased by 947,000 bushels.

Rubber: The expected replacement buying is not yet in evidence.
The English stocks of rubber show a decrease of 161 tons.

Hides: The belief that the drought in the Western section of the Country will increase slaughterings has induced some selling.

S. C. & F. Wall Street Journal morning comment:—"It is estimated that this year's Company income will total seven billion dollars, the highest since 1929. Investment demand for stocks is decreasing. Business has been well sustained in spite of tax fears. No matter who is elected President of the United States in November, inflationary legislation is unlikely. Most observers are of the opinion that the present irregularity is the forerunner of higher prices.
Silver stocks are under pressure.
Some authorities believe that the selling of steel shares has been overdone."

CINEMA
NOTES

Betty and Maggie, two twenty-year-old white mules, have crashed Hollywood. They arrived at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios from Excelsior Springs, Mo., together with ten hound pups, and went immediately to work in "The Voice of Bugle Ann" with Lionel Barrymore. The new picture comes on Tuesday to the Alhambra Theatre. The mules are the special breed used on the Missouri farms, and are unlike ordinary California mules in many respects, having longer ears, a bigger frame, and larger eyes. They are sisters, and were leased from a farmer in the district. The mules draw a plow for scenes where Eric Linden, playing Barrymore's son, tills the soil in the new picture, based on Mackinlay Kantor's novel of an old Missouri master and his favorite "fox-hound."
Richard Thorne, and John W.
Conside, Jr., produced the picture.
Maureen O'Sullivan and Eric Linden head the supporting cast.

"Miss Pacific Fleet"

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, blonde menaces of the screen, again teamed as gay gold diggers, will come to the Oriental Theatre to-morrow
Thursday in "Miss Pacific Fleet."
Playing with them are those two inimitable comedians, Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins, with Warren Hull, the famous radio singer, in the romantic role. The picture is a gay and rollicking comedy which also carries a glamorous romance. The fun starts in an amusement park at a naval base on the Pacific Coast where Joan and Glenda, two stranded chorus beauties, are running a cune raffle. Hilarious situations follow each other in quick succession winding up in a mellodramatic smash in which there is a kidnapping, a motor boat chase for the abducted girl and a free-for-all battle between sailors, swimmers, and their girls at the contest hall. Others in the cast include Eddie Acuff, Marie Wilson, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams and Anita Kerry besides hundreds of extras in the roles of sailors and marines.

"Dark Angel"

Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall play the three lovers lost helplessly about by the violent tides of life in "The Dark Angel," the new Samuel Goldwyn production, showing at the King's Theatre to-day.
Set in a lovely, quiet corner of rural England, the story, which Lillian Hell-man and Mordecai Shalay adapted to the screen from a play by Guy Bolton, reflects the conflicts and triumphs in the life of Kitty Vane, a beautiful English girl who, since childhood, has been loved by one boy, Gerald Shannon (Marshall), while she loves his cousin, Alan Trent (March). Months in the trenches bring to Alan the realization of his love for Kitty.
Home on leave, he confesses his loves and they ecstatically arrange to marry on the morrow. An order cancelling all leaves shatters their dream, however, and they spend their last hours together trying to forget that they may never see each other again.
The story proceeds from this point to a powerful emotional climax and after many vicissitudes, the lovers are granted to face the future together.
Sidney Franklin directed "The Dark Angel" for release through United Artists. The supporting cast is headed by Janet Beecher, John Halliday, Henrietta Greenwood, Freda Inescourt, Claude Allister, George Breakston and Cora Sue Collins.

"Personal Maid's Secret"

"Personal Maid's Secret," the new Warner Bros. comedy drama, opens at the Star Theatre to-day, with Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull, Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly in the stellar roles. The picture is based on a story by Lillian Day, which appeared

Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Prime Minister had been informed in advance of the intention to deliver them.

In passages in the War Minister's speech to which attention was particularly directed Mr. Duff Cooper was reported as saying that the ideals of France and Britain and their frontiers were in mortal danger, adding that France's frontiers were Britain's frontiers.

In the absence of Mr. Baldwin the series of questions were answered by the Deputy Leader, Sir John Simon. He revealed the circumstances in which the Secretary for War's speech was delivered and added that his remarks were not a declaration of policy, but the speech devoted to the stressing elements common to the people of both countries. The place for declaration of Government policy was, of course, the House of Commons and that policy was fully stated in the House by the Foreign Secretary and the Prime Minister in the course of the debates of June 18 and 23.

The observations of the Secretary for War were not designed to be in conflict with these declarations at all. He added that Mr. Duff Cooper submitted a draft of his speech to the Foreign Office and subsequently altered it in certain respects, in response to their suggestions. In its final form, the speech did not come under the personal notice of the Foreign Secretary, but that was due to pressure of other engagements, and was not intentional.

LABOUR MOTION

In reply to supplementary questions, including one by the Conservative, Sir Arnold Wilson, who suggested that such pronouncements caused real confusion and alarm among supporters of the Government, Sir John Simon said he could not admit that the War Minister's remarks called for these strictures. He repeated that it was not a declaration of Government policy.

At the close of questions, the Labour Leader, Mr. Attlee, moved the adjournment of the House to call attention to "the action of the Secretary for War in making, in a foreign country immediately before the meeting of the Assembly of the League, public pronouncements which conflict with the declared policy of the Government and treaty obligations by which this country is bound."

The motion was accepted and the debate is now proceeding.—British Wireless.

Headaches On The Increase, Speed of Living Blamed.

An eminent medical authority states that headaches are on the increase, and he attributes this to the 'speeding up' which is so marked a feature of modern civilization. "We are all in such a hurry to get about rapidly, to climb socially and to fill our lives with so many things, that we never get sufficient rest," he says. What the learned doctor means, of course, is that these headaches are mostly due to nerve strain. But unfortunately few of us can relax—so to do, we fear, would mean falling behind in the race. So the only course is to watch our nerves, and our general health, keeping both tuned up to high efficiency.

Since the nerves, the brain, the stomach, and all other parts of the human body, are dependent upon the blood for nourishment, it is only by means of good, rich, red blood that we can restore them, when run-down, to healthy activity. And to do this it is wise to seek the aid without delay of a high-grade, reliable blood and nerve tonic, such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which impart, among other helpful things, fresh supplies of that all-important strengthening element, iron, to the blood at every dose, thus revitalizing the nervous system, restoring strength to the digestion, and imparting a joyous sense of renewed vigour and health.

Equally good for men and women, old and young, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a record of over fifty years' service behind them, so you can feel confident that what they have have done for others they will do for you. Obtainable from chemists everywhere; begin your cure to-day.

LAW-MAKING BY REGULATIONS

The recent summoning of two ladies at home for having shared with others the cost of taxi hire, and thus caused or permitted motor vehicles to be used as "express" carriages, has received considerable attention both in the Press and in legal circles. The issue was eventually taken to the Appeal Court, with the result that the "offence" was established in one case. We are not concerned with the cases as such, but there is a comment thereon, appearing in the Law Journal, which touches on a matter which is not without its applicability to Hongkong. The cases, in the opinion of this organ, are examples of the results of a growing habit of State interference with the lives of ordinary people, which is pushing England, indirectly and assiduously, in the direction of "Totalitarianism."

"It is becoming 'common form,' says the Law Journal, 'for the State to interfere, by its Marketing Boards, its Traffic Commissioners, and its statutes, empowering Ministers to make regulations for this, that and the other, in almost every aspect of national life and private ownership; and it is suggested that the nation's law-makers might do much worse than to remember the dictum of Aristotle that 'the State came into existence to enable man to live, and exists to enable him to live well.' The conception that the individual exists for the State, remarks the authority quoted, 'seems to us a horsey far more dangerous and damnable than any for which the fires of Smithfield were lit, or a bonfire of Bishops blazed outside Balliol College.' The comment is timely, and, as we say, it could well be applied to certain aspects of law-making in this Colony. Skeleton Ordinances, giving either the Governor-in-Council or specified Government departments power to make regulations, are all too common here in Hongkong. The general rule is to publish these regulations in the Gazette, but the fact is that very few people see this official organ; whilst in many instances the regulations are so lengthy that re-publication in the columns of the Press, for the purpose of acquainting the public therewith, is quite out of the question. The tendency in this matter of law by regulation is undoubtedly to invest far too much power in Government departments, particularly the police, and it is a tendency which stands in definite need of being checked. The fact is that there is an excess of regulation of the public, which restricts and restrains the ordinary individual at every step and turn, sometimes causing encroachments on personal liberty for which there is little, if any, reason. The process has, indeed,

Did I tell you about my operation?

A MAN who had gone blind told me once that there is no fun in smoking unless you can see the smoke.

I don't think I quite believed him.

But now that I have been blind myself for a month I realise that incredulity can be overcome.

The loss of savour in a cigarette which comes with loss of sight is incredible, but true. It is, perhaps, unimportant, but it is symptomatic of a number of surprises, minor and major, that await you when something goes wrong with your eyes.

Chief of all the major surprises, of course, is the consciousness that something has gone wrong with your eyes. In my case this was mercifully gradual: I cannot even now trace the trouble to its origins.

All I knew was that a column of type seemed to be less clear to read than hitherto; that the lines had an increasing tendency to run into one another; that adjustments of artificial light made no improvement.

OUTSIDE the office things were no better. It became difficult to read the direction boards of buses, to drive a car. Everything I looked at had its shadowy double: no outlines had definition any more.

"Detached retina," was the specialist's verdict. "It's not uncommon," he said. "I get one or two cases every week. Almost anything can cause it—generally some sort of shock. One of my patients recently was a perfectly healthy man who had jumped too heavily on a moving bus. Hearty back-slappers, too, should be avoided."

He told me that the retina of his right eye—the "looking glass" inside, in which we see things—had come away from its moorings, was "flapping about like a blind," that I was unwilling to let him operate it would come right away, probably, and the eye would go blind.

Then he said: "The operation is a comparatively new one; it is successful in about 50 per cent. of cases. But it's not very serious, and it's worth the risk. You'll only be away from work about a couple of months. Think it over."

I certainly did. I couldn't imagine myself idle for so long. I went to see a film—the most light-hearted

NOTES OF THE DAY

The League of Nations is about to lift sanctions, authorities believe, arguing that since the Italian occupation of Ethiopia is accomplished League penalties against the aggressor state no longer serve any useful purpose. The argument appears to be that since Ethiopian resistance has ceased the subjugation of that country may be taken for granted, and that as long as there is no war the League is satisfied with the position. Realising this attitude, the Ethiopian Emperor is taking steps to revive the campaign against Italy in the western corner of his country, where the last stand of the official Government is being made. It seems necessary that there should be a war in Ethiopia before the League can act, before it will even support sanctions, and in this light it must certainly seem that the League is encouraging, rather than preventing, hostilities. We should like to warn the Negus, however, not to expect support from Geneva even if he does renew his resistance to Italian aggression. The methods of some statesmen make a mockery of respect, and we regret to say, the pledges they have made or a guarantee of their assistance in any situation calling for more than words.

gone so far that most of us probably infringe the letter of the law almost every day, unwittingly though it be. It may be true that only a tithe of the regulations are strictly enforced, but that fact only serves to illustrate the folly of continuous additions to the list, and, incidentally, the existence of dead-letter rules certainly tends to bring the law generally into disrepute.

one I could find—in a pathetic effort to cheer myself up, and in the care-free atmosphere decided to take the plunge.

THE operation wasn't so bad. Most comforting of all was the knowledge it brought me that the eye, so sensitive externally to the smallest grain of dust, can react to the knife, most surprisingly with almost complete freedom from pain.

Nothing was more astonishing than the gradual realisation, as I lay in bed afterwards, that I was going to suffer nothing worse than very temporary, very slight and very local discomforts.

And these were chiefly mental, and mitigated by their novelty. I discovered, for instance, that although there is no joy in smoking in the dark, food and drink taste exactly the same. I also found that nobody seemed to know why.

I discovered, too, that the blind do not live in a world that is just plain black. Intermittently I "saw" amazing things with my purely imaginative eyes—things, but, curiously, never people. And the pictures that swam into "view" changed with bewildering rapidity.

A seascape, perhaps, of grandeur far beyond anything I was conscious of ever having beheld, would suddenly take form before my closed eyes. But even as I "gazed" its outlines faded in a sort of shimmering mist. And there, in place of towering cliffs, of giant rollers shattering on the rocks, was a typical suburban garden, tiny, meaningless, incongruous in its contrast.

WHAT was the meaning of these illustrations? The Freudian explanation does not seem to fit: these were no fantasies of the sub-conscious streaming into "vision" during sleep. My eyes were closely bandaged, but my mind was wide awake.

This ghostly cavalcade that flashed and faded on my mental screen meant nothing to me, conveyed no messages, solved no problems. All that could be said is that its components had recognizable similarity to objects I "knew by sight." To any one born blind, who has never grasped the shape of things as they are, these dream pictures must be queer indeed.

No one can ever know whether the impressions formulated in such a brain have any close resemblance to facts—not even the blind themselves. You can teach them what grass, for instance, feels like; you cannot describe green to any one who has never seen it.

That is only one of the riddles you ponder as you lie in the dark. Another is the curious difficulty of conceiving thought on any one subject without looking at something at the same time—even a blank sheet of paper.

YOU would imagine that, with all outside distractions removed, this would be so much the easier. But I found it impossible to keep the mind fixed in one channel for any useful period, or to control its excursions into the fantastic without an effort of determination of which one felt hardly capable.

This was noticeably the case when being "read to." Perhaps a newspaper man develops an uncanny facility for knowing what can safely be left unread, but it is a fact that the European crisis, as an example, transmitted to the mind through the medium of the ears alone, seemed thoroughly unreal.

Many troubles, both personal and international, would probably never arise if their beginnings simply passed unseen.

This is not quite so whimsical as it sounds. It lends up, anyway, to a subject of real importance—whether the unseeing hunger for news that is inherent in all of us can ever be satisfied by a radio broadcast. No one is better qualified to answer this than a man who has gone blind.

And the answer is in the negative. News that is merely heard, no matter how deep its portent, makes no mark during impressions on the mind unless it is reinforced by the printed or written word.

Radio has limitations never realised by the five senses. Remove the most precious of these and you put it in its true perspective. It enables a sightless man to hear somebody saying something. It enables him to visualise personalities—it is only by listening to a woman speak, by hearing the smile in her voice, that a blind man can fall in love.

It helps to preserve the sanity of those for whom every day is twenty-four hours of darkness. It kills, or at any rate dopes, the demon of loneliness. But that is all.

I USED to amuse myself in hospital by constructing mental pictures of the nurses who tended me. I had little to go on but their voices, but these, I imagined, would give useful clues to their visible characteristics. When my sight came back I had several shocks, some unexpectedly pleasant, some not so good. But in no single instance had my ears, aided by the eyes, told me the truth. As a working basis in normal life this knowledge will perhaps be valuable. In any case, I should probably never have realised the extent of the deceptive powers of sound if I had been spared the experience of spending a month in the dark.

YOUNG MEN'S THOUGHTS ON WAR

FALSE GLAMOUR

I MOST emphatically do not want another war, nor, I feel certain, can any sane individual who has devoted the slightest thought to the problem.

War of any kind was long since an anachronism, and if with its modern resources it broke out again on a large scale it might end civilisation.

War had originally a certain glamour about it in so far as it allowed free play to the savage lust for hand-to-hand conflict, sublimated by the desire to protect one's nearest and dearest from a bloodthirsty aggressor. That element, however, is wholly lacking in modern warfare.

Another war would be conducted mainly by the air, and the first to suffer would be the civilian population.

All authorities are agreed that so long as nations possess aeroplanes no defensive force whatever can prevent a certain number of the invaders getting through. With warfare in three dimensions there are not thereby so many square miles to patrol and protect but the air above to a height of 25,000 feet or more.

Such great progress has been made in cloud flying that nowadays pilots can fly blind to their objectives, guided by wireless, drop their bombs and return unseen. It is obvious that the targets would be the large cities and the arsenals, dockyards, foodstores, ships, and reservoirs.

Bombs containing poison gas and bacteria as well as the ordinary explosive variety would be used. The effect, in addition to loss of life, would be to cut off food and water supplies, and in a short time to reduce a nation to submission by starvation and terror.

Retaliation, it is true, might have a similar effect on the opposition, and no doubt the survivors on both sides would be hastily negotiating for peace from their respective ruins, the lesson at last well learnt, but at how great a price!

Further, even were it possible, despite this civilian slaughter, to set up a battle front, wherein would the glamour lie? The warfare would be almost entirely mechanised, and of the glorious hand-to-hand fighting so dear to the schoolboy imagination there would be none, merely an orgy of mass murder by air, long range shelling, poison gas, and liquid fire, aided when necessary by tanks and machine guns.

Surely the dreadful object lesson would not fail in time to have an appreciable effect.

An Ordinary Mortal
EVERY active young man longs for adventure and excitement, and, unfortunately, many still cherish the idea of war simply because they regard it as a sure method of gaining these things.

Full of the desire to prove themselves and to achieve something in the world, most young men, naturally, find the daily round monotonous. Throughout the ages they have been welcoming a just cause and a stirring fight in support of it.

Indeed, war has for so many centuries been the glamorous, romantic opportunity for the young man to prove his mettle that it is not surprising many still hail its possible advent with delight.

They are longing so ardently for an opportunity to crusade that they overlook the fact that war has evolved into something deadly and terrible.

It is no longer the stirring affair of open charges and of sword, lance, and manly combat that it has been in bygone days.

The development of science, war has become synonymous with mass destruction by high explosive, gas, and mechanised forces. It must inevitably result in all-embracing turmoil in which the civilian population will be attacked and women and children sacrificed.

So, since modern warfare has become a thing of horror, it is plainly the young man's duty to admit that war as an outlet for his unrest and his longing for adventure is no longer normally conceivable.

This is no easy task, for progress and modern methods have changed the character of war, but not the psychology of the young man. Still, the facts of the last war are plain, and every young man owes it to civilisation to admit them to himself. To him as an individual war may mean many things, but to his country it can mean only one thing—a tragic disturbance in the life of the people. A refusal to admit this counts to more than mere selfishness, and is in no way gallant or heroic.

The young man must seek other outlets for his enthusiasm and his desire for strife, achievement, and self-resolution.

Young men do not need to go to war so long as there are mountains to be climbed, regions of the earth and phases of science to be explored, causes of social right to be advanced, and so long as great endeavour is still possible, on land, sea, and in the air.

This is not mere idle talk. Two years ago I was twenty-one, and was working in an office with no apparent means of ever getting out of it. I would still be there if I had not realised that hoping would get me nowhere. So I made the break, and hoped for the best.

Since then I have managed to travel nearly 20,000 miles, and in some of the wilder parts of the globe I have had a good share of the excitement I craved.

I do not want war, for I have made the discovery that the world in peace is a great adventure—and it is open to every young man who wants to prove himself.

RODE RACE IN A TANK WITH A QUEEN

Colonel Who Married His Nurse Dies in Paris
CHINESE CALLED HIM "WHITE DEVIL WITH GOOD HEART BUT BAD TEMPER"

COLONEL EDWARD BRYCE, winner of the D.S.O. and two bars for gallantry during the war, a famous tank battalion commander, has died in Paris at the age of 56.

Two years ago the colonel, a powerfully built man, was stricken with paralysis. For a year he lay gravely ill. He was nursed back to health by Miss Erica Fromen, an Australian nurse, whom he married in February this year.

Before the marriage there was a case in the Paris courts, in which the Colonel's sister, Mrs. Phillips, of Whitechurch, Hants, lodged a protest against the proposed marriage on the ground that her brother was paralysed and unfit to make such a decision.

Colonel Bryce was represented in court by Miss Yvonne Netter, a leading woman barrister. Mrs. Phillips' protest was rejected.

PROSPECTED FOR GOLD. Edward Daniel Bryce, the son of a Devonshire J.P. and of a South American mother, had had an adventurous career. Educated at Harrow, he went to a crammer at Canterbury to prepare for an army career. Before he was 18 he had left the crammer for Chile and Peru, where he began prospecting for gold at a height of 8,000 ft.

A year or two later he transferred his activities to the Malay States. He was one of the rubber pioneers in the State of Johore and was engaged to the daughter of the Sultan of that State. They had a common interest in racing, for the colonel was a great figure on the Singapore turf.

A man of powerful physique, he had a violent temper combined with the most generous disposition in the world. The Chinese put up a notice outside his bungalow in Johore. It stood there for months until the colonel took the trouble to ask what it meant. The translation was: "This white devil has a good heart but a bad temper."

By 1910 he had made a considerable fortune in rubber, part of which he lost in the subsequent slump.

THE WAR. The Great War gave him his big chance. He had always wanted to be a soldier, and when tanks came in, he found his mettle. He became a tank commander under General Monash, for whom he formed an immense admiration. The Australian general knew how to handle him—not an easy matter—and gave him more or less a free hand.

Bryce's methods in attack were always the same. He insisted on leading his tanks into action walking outside them on foot.

The late King Albert, the Queen of the Belgians, and the present King of the Belgians once went to inspect his tanks.

Bryce put each of them into separate tanks and made them race. He took the Queen himself. The Queen's tank won.

A RICCADIALLY MEMORY. Bryce was a great leader of men and as fearless as he was kind. I remember walking with him during the war in Piccadilly Circus. Suddenly he saw an officer on crutches trying to cross the street. The traffic looked threatening. "Gosh, that's terrible the world as it has in the past," he said, and ergotism is almost extinct. But Bubonic Plague, the magazine warned, "may yet show sufficient life to invade civilized communities once more in epidemic proportions."

"In relatively recent years," the Journal continued, "there has been definite evidence of a decline in frequency of a large group of other diseases. Typhoid, tuberculosis, diphtheria and probably syphilis are less frequent or less generally virulent than some one or two hundred years ago."

"Part of this change must be assigned to sanitary measures and improved treatment, but part, especially for syphilis and probably diphtheria, may be due to increased race resistance and natural decline of virulence, which might be expected after vigorous flourishing for several centuries."

New disease mankind must face are paratyphoid or "parrot fever," typhus, and "rabbit fever" and spirilla jaundice.

"It is not yet possible," the Journal concluded, "to say whether these and like diseases will die in infancy or attain full growth with wide invasion. It is perhaps possible to say that, of these, spirilla jaundice is the most likely to become widespread."

The Journal cited the decline of Bubonic Plague, leprosy, cholera, and ergotism in more recent times. Leprosy "will probably never again terrify the world as it has in the past," it said, and ergotism is almost extinct. But Bubonic Plague, the magazine warned, "may yet show sufficient life to invade civilized communities once more in epidemic proportions."

AUSTRIA WORRIED BY REICH MACHINE

Vienna, June 28.
Alarms of invasion by Hitler's mighty military machine keep the frontier zone between Austria and Germany in a periodical state of nerves, but life along the border is nevertheless not without light diversion.

Over an area stretching two hundred and fifty miles, from the Swiss frontier to the edge of Czechoslovakia, armed guards who speak the same language and who fought side by side in the World War as comrades glare hatred and defiance at each other.

On one side of the frontier, in Germany, followers of Herr Hitler are heroes. If they cross the border south and wave a Swastika or cry "Heil Hitler!" they are bundled off to concentration camps or locked up in one of the prison fortresses in Austria.

The automobilist in Germany always dies a swastika from his car to show he is a good Nazi. But as soon as the Austrian border is reached, if he wishes to cross, he must tear down the flag and hide it. Possession of the Nazi insignia in Austria means arrest.

NAZI SALUTE BARRED. Raising of the arm in the Hitler salute is automatic in Germany, as is the "Heil" slogan. But the disesteemed Nazi who steps on to Austrian soil and forgets his geographical position finds himself in the custody of a cop or a gendarme if he gives the National-Socialist greeting.

What is proud patriotism in Germany is rank treason in Austria. On the German side, Nazi Swastikas fly from every house. Every customs headquarters, along the northern edge of the border bears the words. "The only greeting we want is 'Heil Hitler!'"

Austrians going into Germany must ignore both the flags and the Hitler salute, unless they wish to be under suspicion as Nazis when they return again to their homeland.

CRAZY FRONTIER. A crazier frontier could only have been devised in "Alice in Wonderland." On one side of the National Socialism in the Third Reich an unusual abundance of swastikas float in the breeze on the German side, opposite Braunau.

Herr Hitler was born in the village of Braunau. But no Nazi flag adorns the little house where the ruler of Germany saw the light of day, because Braunau is in Austrian soil.

The frontier line had swerved a few kilometres south at this point, Adolf Hitler would have been German-born.

The military and gendarmic guard announced that they intended to spend a long honeymoon, keep much to themselves, and have most of their meals in their apartments.

Meanwhile, Reuter's Baghdad correspondent reports that King Ghazi's hasty departure from Iraq has hurriedly left the Court at Baghdad to investigate the marriage.

King Ghazi had given his approval to the princess's journey to Europe, because she was in a nervous state of health.

CHAPERONED. The King insisted, however, that she should be accompanied by her sister, Princess Rajiha, two ladies-in-waiting, and a Palace official.

Arrangements had been made for the princess's home country. She fell in love at first sight with Charalambis when visiting Rhodes about a year ago.

The young porter, who had risen rapidly from a position as under-butler, acted as guide to the princess and her party.

Later, they met again at Baghdad. Then came the day when she exercised her Royal prerogative and asked the young Greek porter to be her husband. He accepted.

The Princess was married to him after she had been baptised a Christian by the Greek Orthodox Church. "I am now Mrs. Charalambis," she stated. "I am not a princess any more."

But the princess's sister, alarmed, had followed her to the Greek capital. She discovered that the marriage had taken place, and immediately began to make every effort to have it annulled.

POLICE REFUSE TO ACT. She found out where the couple were staying and visited them with M. Katrabaassas, Chief of the Greek "Scotland Yard."

The couple produced their marriage certificate, and M. Katrabaassas then explained to Princess Rajiha that the police could take no action since the marriage complied with all legal requirements.

Princess Rajiha also called upon the Greek State Attorney, who refused to take any action to have the marriage annulled.

In a last desperate attempt, the princess then lodged a complaint against the couple involving a charge that they had taken family jewels valued at $9,000 and $1,500 in cash.

The police established, however, that the jewels were Princess Rajiha's share of the family hoardings, and the charge was withdrawn.

The princess, who has a private income of £400 a month, is regarded by Moslems as a direct descendant of the Prophet Mahomet.

CHINESE BEGGAR ONLY ONE IN SYDNEY

Kee was sentenced to four months' gaol for begging.

STUDIO'S FIRE

SERIOUS OUTBREAK AT HONGKONG "HOLLYWOOD"

Quite a lot of damage was done yesterday when fire broke out in the studio of the Unique Film Production Co. Ltd., No. 42 Pak Tai Street, Hungnam.

It was about 12.05 p.m. when some folks noticed some films going on fire. An attempt was made by them to extinguish the fire themselves, but when their efforts failed, they telephoned the Kowloon Fire Station for assistance. Five engines, three from Tsimshatsui, one from Mongkok and one from Shamshui, were sent to the scene.

Although the Brigade had little difficulty in checking the fire, it was not until after 2 p.m. that all danger was removed.

The front portion of the building received considerable damage from fire and water. A number of films and a good deal of apparatus were destroyed.

It was stated yesterday that the owners estimated the damage at over $16,000.

Austin Sweeps Through To A Majestic Victory

"BUNNY" AUSTIN

BRILLIANT WIN BY FRAULEIN HORN

WOMEN'S LAST 8

Not for many years has there been such an international flavour about the last eight of the women's singles championship at Wimbledon. Yesterday six players qualified to join Miss Helen Jacobs and Miss Dorothy Round in the quarter-finals as a result of which the following countries will be represented in the fourth round:

England (2), America, Poland, Denmark, Germany, France and Poland.

The brilliant form of Mme. Sperling yesterday, which according to Reuter allowed her to beat Miss Nellie Adamson the Anglo-Belgian in 20 minutes, means that Miss Round will have a difficult time when they meet in the next round.

Nevertheless Miss Jacobs is in the hardest section. She has first to dispose of Senorita Anita Lizana the Chilean champion before going on to meet either Miss Stammers or Mlle. Jedzejowska in the semi-final.

If Miss Round survives her quarter-final engagement she will play either Mme. Mathieu or Frl. Marie Horn.

The draw for the quarter-finals is as follows:

Miss Jacobs (U.S.A.) v. Senorita A. Lizana (Chile) Miss Stammers (England) v. Mlle. Jedzejowska (Poland) Mme. Mathieu (France) v. Frl. Marie Horn (Germany) Mme. Sperling (Denmark) v. Miss D. Round (England).

YESTERDAY'S MATCHES

The players are extremely well matched, but it is expected that the semi-finalists will be Miss Jacobs, Mlle. Jedzejowska, Mme. Mathieu and Miss Round.

DONALD BUDGE

H. W. AUSTIN

WOMEN'S LAST EIGHT

Fred J. Perry (England) the holder, Donald Budge (U.S.A.), Henry W. ("Bunny") Austin (England) and Baron Gottfried Von Cramm (Germany) are the semi-finalists in the men's singles championship at Wimbledon. This was forecast exclusively in the Telegraph yesterday, but the unexpected feature of the matches was that all were finished in three straight sets—probably another Wimbledon record.

Biggest triumphs were those of Austin over Wilmer Allison the American, and Von Cramm against Jack Crawford, Australian ace. It was a black day for Australia. Adrian Quist also took the K.O., Donald Budge, his Davis Cup conqueror being responsible. It was a fine day for England, while America had the consolation of seeing Budge advance in the face of defeats of Bryan Grant and Allison.

According to United Press the following were the scores in the four matches:

F. J. Perry beat B. Grant 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.
D. Budge beat A. Quist 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5, 6-4.

The semi-finals will be played on Wednesday, the draw being:

Perry versus Budge
Austin versus Von Cramm

The final will be played on Friday as is customary, Saturday being set aside for the women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles finals.

REPETITION PROMISED

A repetition of last year's men's final—Perry v. Von Cramm—is indicated, but there is no gainsaying that chances of an all-English final have been considerably improved in consequence of Austin's magnificent display against Allison.

Evidence of the consistency of the world's leading amateur tennis players is revealed by the fact that three of the 1935 semi-finalists have reached the same stage this year. Austin for Crawford is the substitution. Last year Budge beat Austin in the quarter final after the American had started defeat in the face. He went on to be outplayed by Von Cramm.

Of the present semi-finalists only one—Von Cramm—has dropped a set in the course of the four rounds played to date. Perry and Budge have been in irrepressible form and one of the most spectacular matches of a decade is expected when they meet on Wednesday.

Austin's case of accomplishment has been one of the features of the meeting and that he is capable of beating Von Cramm is indisputable. So far as records to hand reveal, Von Cramm and Austin have only met twice in any contest of importance.

Last year in the semi-finals of the French Championship the German beat the Englishman after a wonderful five-set match 6-2, 5-7, 6-1, 6-7, 6-0, while in 1932 Von Cramm defeated Austin in the Davis Cup 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Perry has last year's Davis Cup victory and some U.S.A. tournament successes over Budge to his credit and because of these must start firm favourite in his quest to-morrow.

Mako And Budge Out Of Wimbledon Doubles

ARE FORCED TO WITHDRAW

London, June 29. The quest of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist to retain the men's doubles title at Wimbledon has been considerably lightened by the withdrawal from the competition to-day of Gene Mako and Donald Budge, the United States champions.

A message from Reuter says that Mako's shoulder is still troubling him and he has scratched from the men's doubles with Budge and from the mixed doubles with Miss Caroline Babcock.

No further news has been received in Hongkong concerning G. P. Hughes who last week had to withdraw from the singles owing to heart strain, but it is possible that he will also refrain from continuing in the doubles with C.R.D. Tuckey in order to save himself for the Davis Cup.

If Hughes decides to continue at Wimbledon, he and Tuckey will constitute the biggest menace to Crawford and Quist.

JAPANESE TO ROW AT HENLEY

Special Boat Sent From Tokyo

A Japanese oarsman who rowed in the Oxford University trial eight whilst an undergraduate at Hertford College has secured the acceptance of an agreement with the regatta committee which has enabled Tokyo University senior eight to be accepted for the Grand Challenge Cup.

Never before has an entry been accepted from Japan.

In addition to the Japanese other foreign crews will be competing, and an outstanding regatta is promised. The secretary of the regatta said he understood the Japanese crew would arrive by air from Berlin and would train at Henley. A special boat is being sent from Tokyo.

COLOURS—LIGHT BLUE

Tokio University represents the cream of Japanese rowing. Its colours are light blue, as also are those of Cambridge and Eton.

As the men average 10 stone in weight, they are the lightest crew who have ever taken part in a senior event at Henley.

The Oxford oarsman, Mr. Olavski, rowed for Tokio University before going to Oxford, and he now holds an official position in the Japanese Bank in London. He will assist Dr. Seta, who is accompanying the crew as coach.

TEST MATCH SECOND INNS: COLLAPSE BY ALL-INDIA CLOSE OF PLAY 80 FOR 7

London, June 29. It was cheerless at Lord's to-day with the skies threatening rain throughout the afternoon.

Although England's outstanding three wickets fell for an additional two runs, leaving All-India with a first innings lead of 13, the visitors found themselves in a serious position when bad light and rain stopped play shortly after the tea interval.

At tea six wickets had fallen for 56 runs. In the third over after the adjournment Khan nicked a ball from Verity for Duckworth to hold (61-7-13).

The light was rapidly falling and play was held up for ten minutes to be resumed for one over, after which stumps were drawn for the day with All-India's second innings score at 80 for 7.

Present scores read:
All India 147 and 80 for 7
England 134

LEAGUE TENNIS K.C.C. SECOND STRING LOSE

To Club Colleagues CLARK & MRS. KEW IN FORM

Both K.C.C. mixed doubles teams had introduced reserves when they met in a league match yesterday. G. C. Burnett substituted for Ernie Fincher who is suffering from influenza, while S. A. Gray deputised for A. E. P. Guest who is also under medical orders.

Conditions were somewhat distressing, a sharp shower falling during the match which added greenness to an already soft surface. A brisk breeze was a further disconcerting factor and in view of these disadvantages the play was creditably high.

K.C.C. (1) were somewhat more extended than the final scores suggest. The second string were finely served by G. Clark and Mrs. McCaw, who not only held Bodiker and Miss Mackenzie to a draw but took a set from Burnett and Miss Griffiths. Gray and Mrs. Kew all but snatched half a set from E. C. Fincher and Miss Dalziel, the losers holding two game points on Miss Dalziel's service for six-all. But they could not consolidate the advantage.

E. C. Fincher and Miss Dalziel beat Clark and Mrs. McCaw 6-2; beat S. A. Gray and Mrs. Kew 7-5; beat C. E. Watson and Miss Engel 6-3.

G. Bodiker and Miss Mackenzie ("A") drew with Clark and McCaw 6-6; beat Gray and Kew 6-3; beat Watson and Engel 6-2.
G. C. Burnett and Miss Griffiths ("A") lost to Clark and McCaw 2-6; and Engel 6-0.

CANTAB'S AMAZING RUNNING

QUARTER-MILE IN 49.1,
HALF IN 1.56

AND EQUALS SPRINT RECORD

(By Fred Dartnell)

A. G. K. Brown was in devastating form for Cambridge University in their annual athletic match with the A.A.A. at Fenner's Ground, Cambridge, which resulted in a victory for the A.A.A. by a single point—70½ points to 69½.

Brown commenced his activities by winning the 100 yards in 9.7sec. to equal the British record established by Eric Liddell at Stamford Bridge 13 years ago. A quarter-mile in 49.1sec. was his next achievement, and he wound up his competitive work for the Light Blues by leading the way home in the half-mile in 1min. 56sec.

The Cambridge secretary is probably the most versatile runner of the day. Thirty years ago these times would have been regarded almost as superhuman. Brown won each time without turning the proverbial hair.

APPETITE FOR EXERTIONS

A following wind may have aided him in the shorter races but what speed and what an insatiable appetite for exertion this Brown displays!

They are speculating at Cambridge as to which event will prove Brown's chief forte. For my part, I think the Quarter is his best distance, but a man with his amazing finish, who can do 9.7sec. for the 100 yards, ought to get some astonishing figures for the 100 metres (29.3 yards), which is the Olympic distance.

Duncan, of all his competitors, made the best show, against the flying Cantab. He did even time in the sprint.

McCabe made a game finish in the Half and lost only by a yard, but Scrimshaw was third, 20 yards worse. As I anticipated, Ward and Close had a great race in the Three Miles. Close made most of the running, but in the last furlong Ward mastered him for pace and came gloriously home with a 60 yards margin, to beat the ground record by five seconds in 14min. 27.6sec.

BURGHLEY'S RECORD EQUALLED

Cambridge got another win in the Mile, where E. L. Ellis, with his crackling speed down the final straight, took all the fight out of Reg Thomas, the time being 4min. 20.4sec. Don Finlay quelled Lord Burghley's track record of 14.8sec. made nine years ago in the shorter hurdles, and just to emphasise the Brown study of triumph R.K. of that ilk, won the Quarter Hurdles in 57.1sec., a family fausme, so to speak, that contributed 20 points towards the Cambridge aggregate.

In the Weight, Ali Irfan, the Cambridge Turk, beat Howland, his colleague, by 13in. with 47ft. 7½in., another new record.

It is more than likely that the whole programme will be abandoned. A restricted lawn bowls championship schedule is also arranged for to-day, the principal sports fixtures being as follows.

Tru Benised Collars on these New Shirts

TRUBENISING is a new scientific process which makes a soft collar look starched without stiffening the fabric. A collar so treated will retain its neat appearance for the life of the shirt; and it will have a long-wearing life because TRUBENISING does not shorten the life of collars as does starch.

A TRUBENISED collar provides immaculate grooming without stiffness or discomfort. It is porous and absorbent like any soft collar; but it will not crush, wrinkle, or buckle in wear. It will not develop rough edges and will not blister or wilt—like a starched collar—from water or perspiration.

"DETERMINED TO DO OUR BEST"

Announces China's Olympic Team

FAREWELL MESSAGE

Shanghai, June 25.

William Z. L. Sung, honorary general secretary of the China National Amateur Athletic Federation, and leader of the Chinese Olympic invasion of Berlin, last night gave his farewell message to the nation through The Shanghai Times, on the eve of the delegation's departure for Germany.

"We are going to Berlin," he declared, "with but little hope of success, but we are determined to do our best in every event in which we participate."

"China is sending her best to Berlin. We realize that we have much to learn, and it is our hope that by active participation in as many events as possible, we will gain that experience which is so vitally needed by our athletes. We hope to learn the finer points of the game, so that on our return to China we will be in a position to hand on to others the knowledge that we have gained."

"It is particularly significant that we are sending no fewer than forty physical directors to the games as observers only and to attend the various conferences which will be held in Germany in connection with the games. I am sure that when they return they will be able to contribute to our stock of knowledge ideas which will revolutionize the policies of the C.N.A.A.F. and the Ministry of Education."

"FOUR YEARS' PROGRESS
Looking back over the last four years, it is astonishing to note the progress that has been made by China's athletes. It is reflected in every field of sport, with records set at higher standards and the nation becoming actively conscious of its physical necessities. In 1932, China was represented at the Olympic Games in Los Angeles by a solitary competitor. This year we are sending 80 athletes and 40 physical directors. We can well be proud of our progress over four years."

"The Chinese Olympic Committee has received invaluable assistance from many quarters in its efforts to launch this year's Olympic effort, but from no other quarter has assistance been so valuable as from the press, foreign and Chinese alike. We have been guided by their advice, encouraged by their praise and aided even by their criticisms, all of which, it has been proved time and again, were eagerly directed for the promotion of athletics here."

"To the Government we must extend our thanks for their financial assistance in a time of stress, and for the generous public subscription we are also grateful. With this support, it would have been impossible for us to be represented at Berlin," Sung concluded.

"VICTORY WITH HONOUR"
Through The Shanghai Times also, Lt. Col. K. R. Chel, C.O. of the German army, sent his last message to the Chinese team.

"I wish you good luck and success in my country," he said, "And I wish you victory with honour."

NINE DIRECTORS OF CLUB RESIGN

Southampton Football Surprise

Southampton, June 7.

Sensation was caused in Southampton to-day when it was announced that nine of the twelve directors of the Southampton Football Club had resigned.

It was officially stated that they had voluntarily and unreservedly placed their resignations in the hands of the three principal guarantors of the club in order to facilitate a financial reorganisation.

The three guarantors are Major R. C. H. Sloane Stanley, Mr. H. H. G. Blagrove and Mr. W. Penn Barrow, and they have co-opted two of the resigning directors, Mr. C. F. Hoskins and Mr. J. R. Sarjantson, to the board to assist in the reconstruction.

NEW BOARD

A new board of directors will eventually be formed.

Of the seven other resigning directors three have long records of service. Mr. W. A. Hammock was appointed in 1897, Mr. A. A. Wood 1890, and Mr. W. Bulpitt in 1902.

Mr. E. Arnfield became a director in 1923 after relinquishing the secretaryship, which he had held since the conversion of the original amateur club into a limited liability company.

Mr. G. H. Muir was formerly secretary of Hampshire County Cricket Club and is at present president of Hampshire Football Association.

He played in the first match when the club was formed in 1885. The other resigning directors are Mr. C. S. Havers and Sir George Johnstone.

he is to speak at the City of London Conservative Association Banquet. Mr. Ramsey MacDonald president over a special Cabinet meeting held this morning, and Sir John Simon, Deputy Leader of the House, will answer questions in the Commons addressed to the Premier. British Wireless.

CHAPTER I

"PAINLESS DOC" PENNINGTON, and his assistant, Roy Banks, had taken Horace Greeley's advice. In fact, the overland stagecoach, in which they were bound for the Indian Territory of the West, would be reaching New York in two days. And that was just the way they wanted it.

There was a rumour of another heavyweight wrestling match at Madison Square Garden, which explained, somewhat, why the westbound stage was a bit crowded of a New Jersey afternoon—that, and the fact that there was a gold rush in California. So, as the stagecoachers phrased it, it was "Westward Ho!" In truth, it was "Ho-ho-ho!" because there was more rush than gold.

From their upper berth, with their stocking feet dangling in and out of the beards of the men below, Doc and Roy were listening to the conversation of the excited group in the coach.

"It won't be many weeks before we're in California," said one of the passengers.

"There'll be gold in them thar hills," croaked another old prospective prospector.

But Doc and Roy weren't interested in the gold in them thar hills. It was the gold in them thar cavities which they were thinking about. Yes, sir, if there was gold in them, they'd take it out; if there wasn't, they'd put it in. They were dentists in the true sense of the word.

They hadn't been in the profession very long. But their apprenticeship of twelve years in the plumbing business served them well. Twelve years! And not once had they forgotten to forget their tool case!

As they rode along, to the boys' it seemed like only day before yesterday that they had exchanged their pliers for the forceps. It should have seemed like that, because it was only the day before yesterday.

In those days Doc was known as Ewald. "Double-or-nothing," Joe said. How he became "Painless Doc" Pennington was another story.

One day, the two washbowl wrestlers had just put the finishing touches on a dental sink for Doctor Philip Pennington, New York painless dentist. And those finishing touches finished the sink all right. In fact, it was sunk. But so was old Doctor P. He couldn't pay the boys for the repairs they had made. To say nothing about the destruction they had made.

Whereupon Ewald helped himself to a half dozen forceps, cocked his ubiquitous cigar to 45° N. by E, and shouted, "Double or nothing!"

A coin was slipped and Pennington lost. "Double or nothing!" again was the cry, and again the filling fixer lost. This time he lost his drilling machine. The game went on and on—

By the time the sun went down, Ewald and Roy, the bathroom busters, had "double" or "nothing" the dentist out of all his equipment, from the chair right down through the pivot teeth and the college diploma.

And that was the moment when Ewald and Roy were graduated from plumbing to dentistry. From that hour hence, Ewald was to be known as "Painless Doc" Pennington; and Roy, his first assistant.

But as Roy observed at the time, they couldn't practice in New York. Everybody knew them there. So, they decided to go West—to the vast Indian Territory.

Carefully packing the dental supplies on the top of the stage, they settled themselves in the coach among the future Bronx cowboys and the Brooklyn cactus pickers. And with a "Yippee!" and a "Yowhee!" they were off.

Four days out of Newark, somewhere in the wilds of Pennsylvania, the stagecoach hit a rock in what was commonly called a road in the Keystone State. Doc thought it was the Keystone itself. When the dust cleared away, Doc and Roy discovered six faces they hadn't seen thus far on the journey.

Among this new half dozen was a pretty little miss who stood out like Ginger Rogers in an old folks home.

One look at her, and Roy and Doc were ready to quit the dentist business and go straight.

They would have, if the girl hadn't opened her lunch box and started to eat a rosy red apple. This opened Doc's professional eyes even further—he hadn't eaten in two days, himself.

"My dear little girl," he addressed her. "If you eat that way, you won't have a tooth in your head in a week!"

"She knows how to eat an apple!" Roy cut in. "He was always one to have a lady in distress—or dat dress, it made no difference."

Doc glared at his assistant. "Yes, but doc, she knows the difference between an apple and a pear! Miss, you can pare an apple but you can't apple a pear! For instance—it takes two apples to make a pair, but only one pear to make a—"

Doc was really wound up in the fruit and tooth business. And it required two weeks and three States to get him unwound. As they bounced through Ohio, the Indians were oblivious to him—they never even heard him. But that was all right with Doc. He'd never heard of Ohio Iowa was all ears. "That's where the tall corn grows!" As they reached the Mississippi River, Doc was still going strong.

— and always bite an apple from right to left. It's an old dental maxim, potent, but true. It dates back to Adam. And of course you all know about Adam's apple."

At this point, Doc paused for breath. The temporary silence awakened Roy who had been asleep since Pittsburgh. "Aw, gee Doc," the assistant molar molder protested, "why don't you give these people a rest?" Then he added shyly, "Particularly this young lady."

Four days of silence passed within the stagecoach. Roy was trying to think how to start talking to this prairie flower. It was evident that Roy was a long, if not a deep, thinker. Finally, he gently cleared his throat. The farmers in the neighbourhood thought another dust storm was coming up. Then he opened up a flowing barrage of oratory.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," the girl replied.

Doc opened one eye. "Say! I didn't tell you to make a speech!"

"What's your name?" Roy asked the girl, with a leer at Doc.

"Mary Blake," Doc said.

"Mary Blake? Gee, what a pretty name. Mine's Roy Banks. Where are you going?"

"Out to the Indian Territory. I've got a job teaching school out there."

"The Indian Territory?" Roy was delighted. "That's where we're going. To Little Town."

"Little Town!" Mary, the school marm, exclaimed. "That's exactly where I'm going."

"Gee!"

"Whom?" Doc interjected, just to keep the horses in the right direction.

Just as the Dutch spendthrifts had given the Mohawks a string of beads for Manhattan, hoping they'd strangle themselves here, they got back to Poughkeepsie, so had the white brother been kind to his red brother in the West. In exchange for Texas, California, Wyoming, a tepee, and two been given two box drums and a vast territory of fertile prairie land—so fertile they could count the blades of grass on their fingers on a clear day.

(Of course, that was during the years that the grass grew at all.)

Also the Indians had been blindfolded and then told to guess where their territory was, and to go to it. Not only that, but they were told to stay there.

Little Town was located in the northeast corner of the southwestern part of the Indian Territory—just north of the appendix, on the edge of the stomach. To the Indians it was a pain.

Something bothered them, anyway, because they were on the warpath. And white brother or no white brother, a scalp was a scalp to them. With or without dandruff.

Britain's Ancient Defences

Dorchester Castle Yields Secret Of Old Warriors

London, June 15.

Maiden Castle, the greatest of several of that title in Great Britain, is gradually yielding up the secrets of its lengthy history under the skilled excavation work of Dr. R. E. Mortimer Wheeler, who is superintending the Society of Antiquaries. The summary of his second year's work has recently been published.

HISTORY MAINLY PEACEFUL
According to Dr. Wheeler's reckoning the first occupation of this high-ground site which overlooks the modern town of Dorchester began about 4,000 years B.C. Here was a pastoral people living in their neolithic village and surrounded by a two-ditch system for its protection. Pottery remnants and flint and horn implements have been found.

MORE ACREAGE ENCLOSED

At this period some 15 acres were enclosed with a rampart and ditch and an entrance. This entrance flanked by a wooden stockade was located last summer by the discovery of the gate sockets. The settlement grew in size, it is now shown, until some 50 acres were enclosed. Then about 100 B.C. came invaders who settled there and built the great fortress of which the remains in excellent condition exist to this day. When the Romans conquered Britain in the first century A.D. the hill fortress seems to have been abandoned and its inhabitants went down into the valley town of Dorchester. But there is another chapter in Maiden Castle's history. Last summer the foundations of a Roman temple were found and a new gateway leading to it in the castle ramparts. On the road to this temple could still be traced the wheel marks of the vehicles which probably brought pilgrims up the hill. Fourth century Roman coins and other relics have also been found round about, including Roman horse-shoes.

The history of the castle seems to have been mainly peaceful, as far more signs of agricultural pursuits have been found than of martial weapons, though pits full of sling-stones have been found.

The sites of the gateway and the temple will be further explored during the coming summer.

Negroes Wreck Italian Shop

RIOT AFTER SPEECH ON ABYSSINIA

New York, June 9.

Inflamed by Communist agitators, who graphically described the plight of Abyssinia, several hundred Harlem negroes went on the rampage last night.

Before police reserves succeeded in bringing them under control they had beaten three policemen, one of their number had been wounded, and two Italian-owned shops had been damaged.

Mindful of the serious riots of a few months ago, the police responded quickly when trouble started, and more than one hundred foot patrol men, augmented by emergency squads and radio cruising cars, reached Harlem within a few minutes of the start of the trouble. This prevented the outbreak assuming more serious proportions. Within two hours it was reported that the region was quiet, and the emergency police were withdrawn.

A negro Communist was arrested and charged with inciting to riot. He had been addressing an outdoor meeting, blaming the capitalist Powers for abandoning Abyssinia to the Italian invaders, and urged his audience to stage an impromptu parade.

POLICE ATTACKED
Scores of listeners started marching down Lenox avenue, shouting and cursing, and when they reached the first Italian shop they proceeded to break the windows and scatter the merchandise in the street. Police tried to arrest the ringleaders, but were set on by the mob and badly beaten before help arrived.

FARMER PLOUGHS UP £825 NUGGET

Gold is still found, in Australia, in most unlikely places. Stuart Hurnall has just ploughed up a 100 oz. nugget, worth about £850, in his father's farm, near Ararat, Victoria. The first short turn of the plough unearthed it, but not until the fifth turn did the dull yellow of the obstruction attract him. An 82 oz. nugget was found in the same field, 48 years ago, only 60 feet from the present find.

Mr. C. Cottrill, of Melbourne, has acquired gold in another way. He had just sat down to his Sunday dinner of sheep's head when his wife had bought from a local butcher, when he noticed the glint of gold in the teeth, says Austral News.

Wrapping his dinner up he immediately took it to a valuer friend who told him that the gold was worth 25/- and that the sheep had evidently been grazing on gold-bearing land. So he decided not to eat his dinner but to keep it and have the jawbone polished.

LESSONS FROM AIR RACE

London, June 24.

The Society of British Aircraft Constructors points out that the four-engined monoplane ordered by the Air Ministry for transatlantic flights has been built according to lessons learned from the Melbourne Centenary Air Race.

Before that event, it states, long-distance pilots were mainly concerned with still air range, and took off with a maximum petrol limit, yet their maximum speed was little more than 100 miles an hour.

The air race showed that speed played a major part in accuracy of navigation, and commercial companies now employ it for that purpose.

The new monoplane, which has been named the Albatross, and which will have a maximum speed of 250 miles an hour, is directly descended from the de Havilland Comets.

ROBOT PLANES IN WARSHIP

THE Argus, 14,450 tons, once an Italian liner, and since the war a British aircraft carrier, is to be refitted to carry pilotless, radio-controlled airplanes.

Radio apparatus is to be installed to control at least eight Queen Bee target machines.

Radio operators can take a Queen Bee off the deck up to 10,000 feet, fly it at 100 m.p.h., dive, climb, turn it and finally bring it back on the deck or on the sea.

The robot planes will be used as flying targets for warships. The refitting of the Argus will cost about £360,000.

Earl Warren, district attorney of Alameda County, has been named Republican national committeeman from California. Warren recently headed a spirited fight that chose an unfractured delegation to the G. O. P. national convention in Cleveland.

U. S. Is O. K. UNDERGRADUATES AND ITS INFLUENCE

"We regret the influence of America" has just been publicly and stirringly debated by Melbourne University's undergraduates. Affirmatives declared that America had Given the world luxuries but nothing to improve spiritual or cultural life.

Established vice as a criterion and get-rich-quick as a dogma.

Set up the worship of wealth to which they crowned their "thanksgiving" in negro spirituals, such as "We're in the Money."

Established the record as the only country to pass from barbarism to decadence without an intervening stage of civilization.

Debated the potential art of the film to exploit for profit man's baser instincts.

The Negatives, however, insisted that America

Led the world in mechanical invention and applied science.

Had done more than any other country in educational research.

Demonstrated a vitality and enthusiasm worthy of imitation.

They found justification for "American blustering" in its sincerity and vitality, and blamed other countries for producing bad films.

And, by popular vote, the Negatives won.

COURIERS SMUGGLE MONEY TO GERMANY

Morecambe, June 24.
BEHIND the revelations of Mr. J. C. Little at the Engineers' Conference at Morecambe yesterday that a group of German trade unionists were planning the overthrow of Hitler lies a fascinating story of a new international secret service.

The full story was told exclusively to-night by Mr. Little, who, in addition to being president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, is chairman of the International Metal Workers' Federation.

Mr. Little explained how, a year ago, this secret service was formed. When former German trade union leaders began their recruitment, only trusted members of works committees corresponding to ship stewards in the English industrial system, were selected. Each was assigned a number.

"The organisers have to guard against the German authorities arresting one of the workers in the international service, torturing him, and extracting confessions incriminating others," remarked Mr. Little.

COLLECTING FUNDS

"Two international collecting committees have been formed. One has headquarters in Paris, and the other in New York. In Paris the committee includes nine or ten Germans, two Frenchmen, and an American."

"Funds collected from trade unions and individual subscribers in many countries, including Great Britain, France, United States, Italy, and Spain are forwarded to the distributing committee."

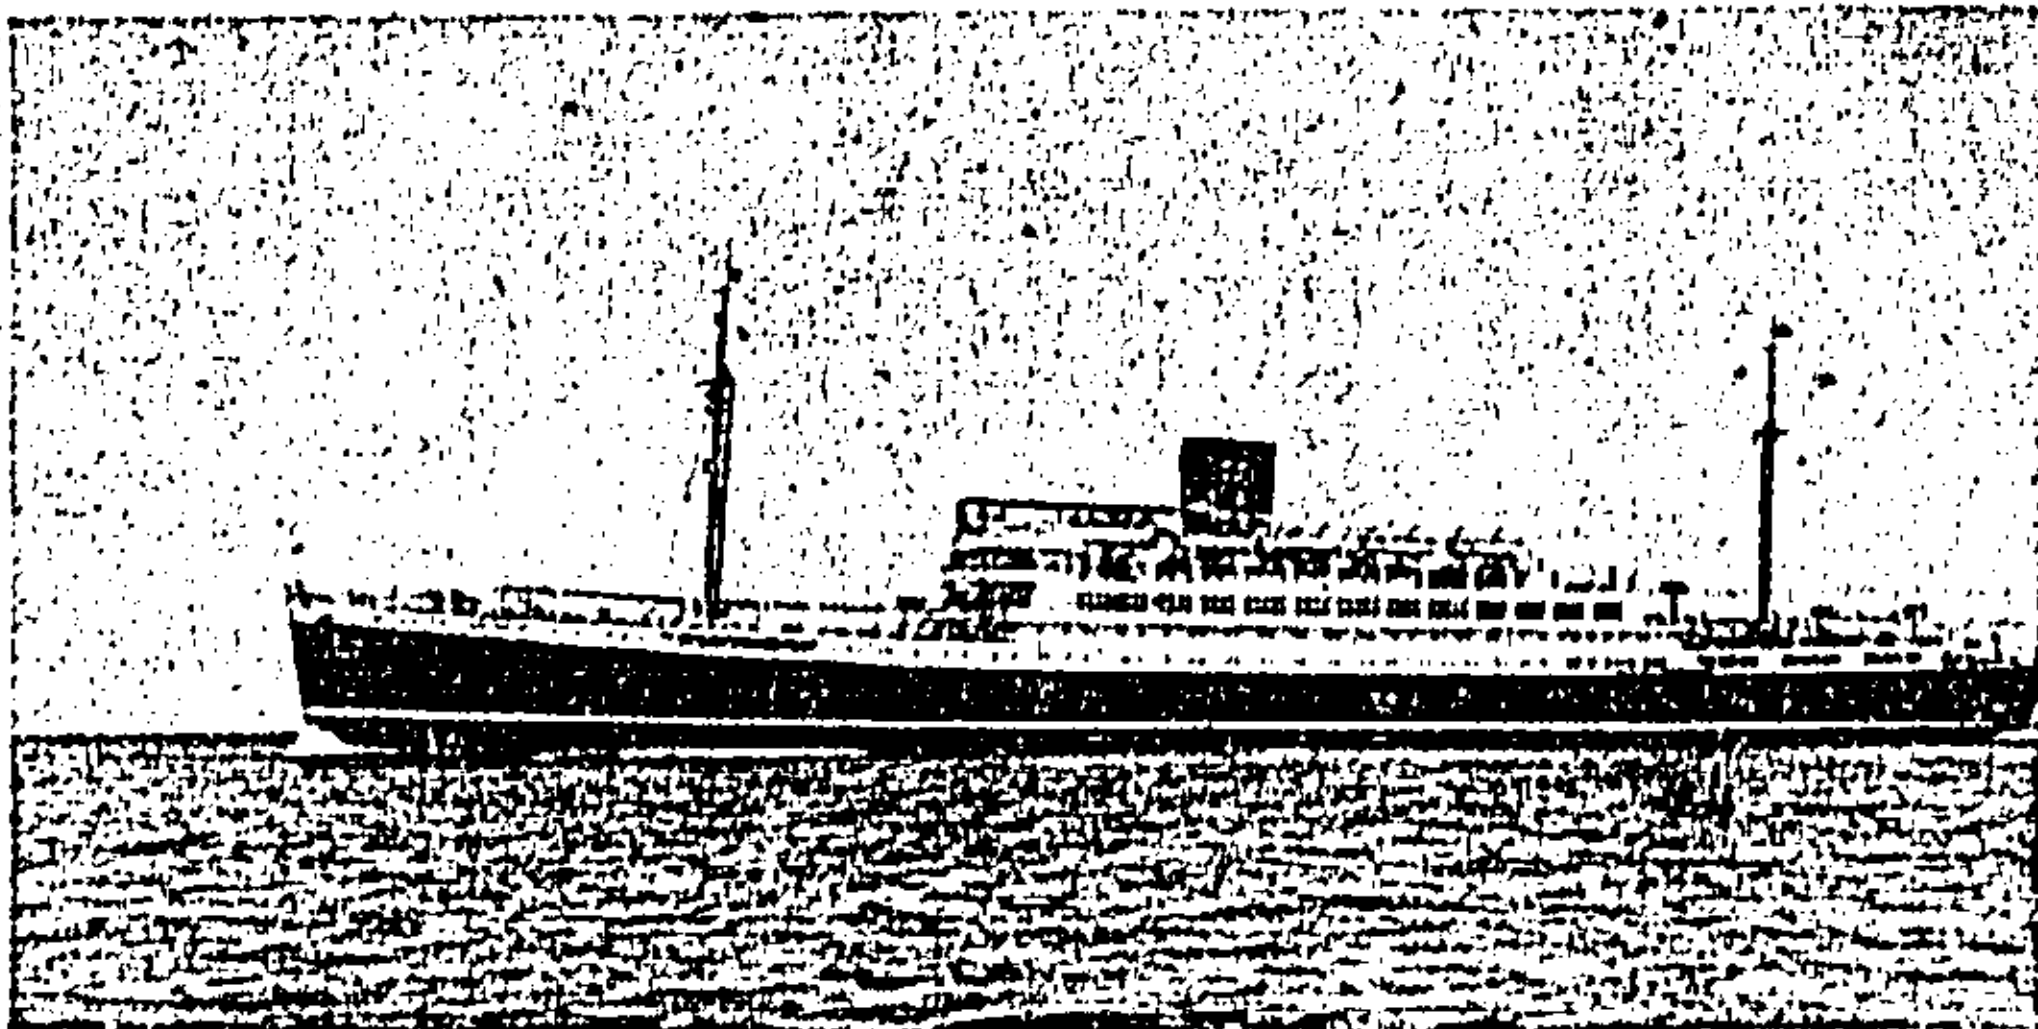

"This committee hands over large sums of money to two couriers, who smuggle the funds into Germany, and then link up with a numbered agent in the Berlin chain."

"The German authorities," added Mr. Little, "know that £15,000 was distributed among supporters in Berlin alone last Christmas."

"Arrangements are being made to extend the operations of these agents outside Berlin."

"The frantic efforts of the German authorities to stamp out this secret service," declared Mr. Little, "is indicated by the arrest of 600 persons in one Berlin suburb."

1886-1936 : Fifty years of shipping in the Far East

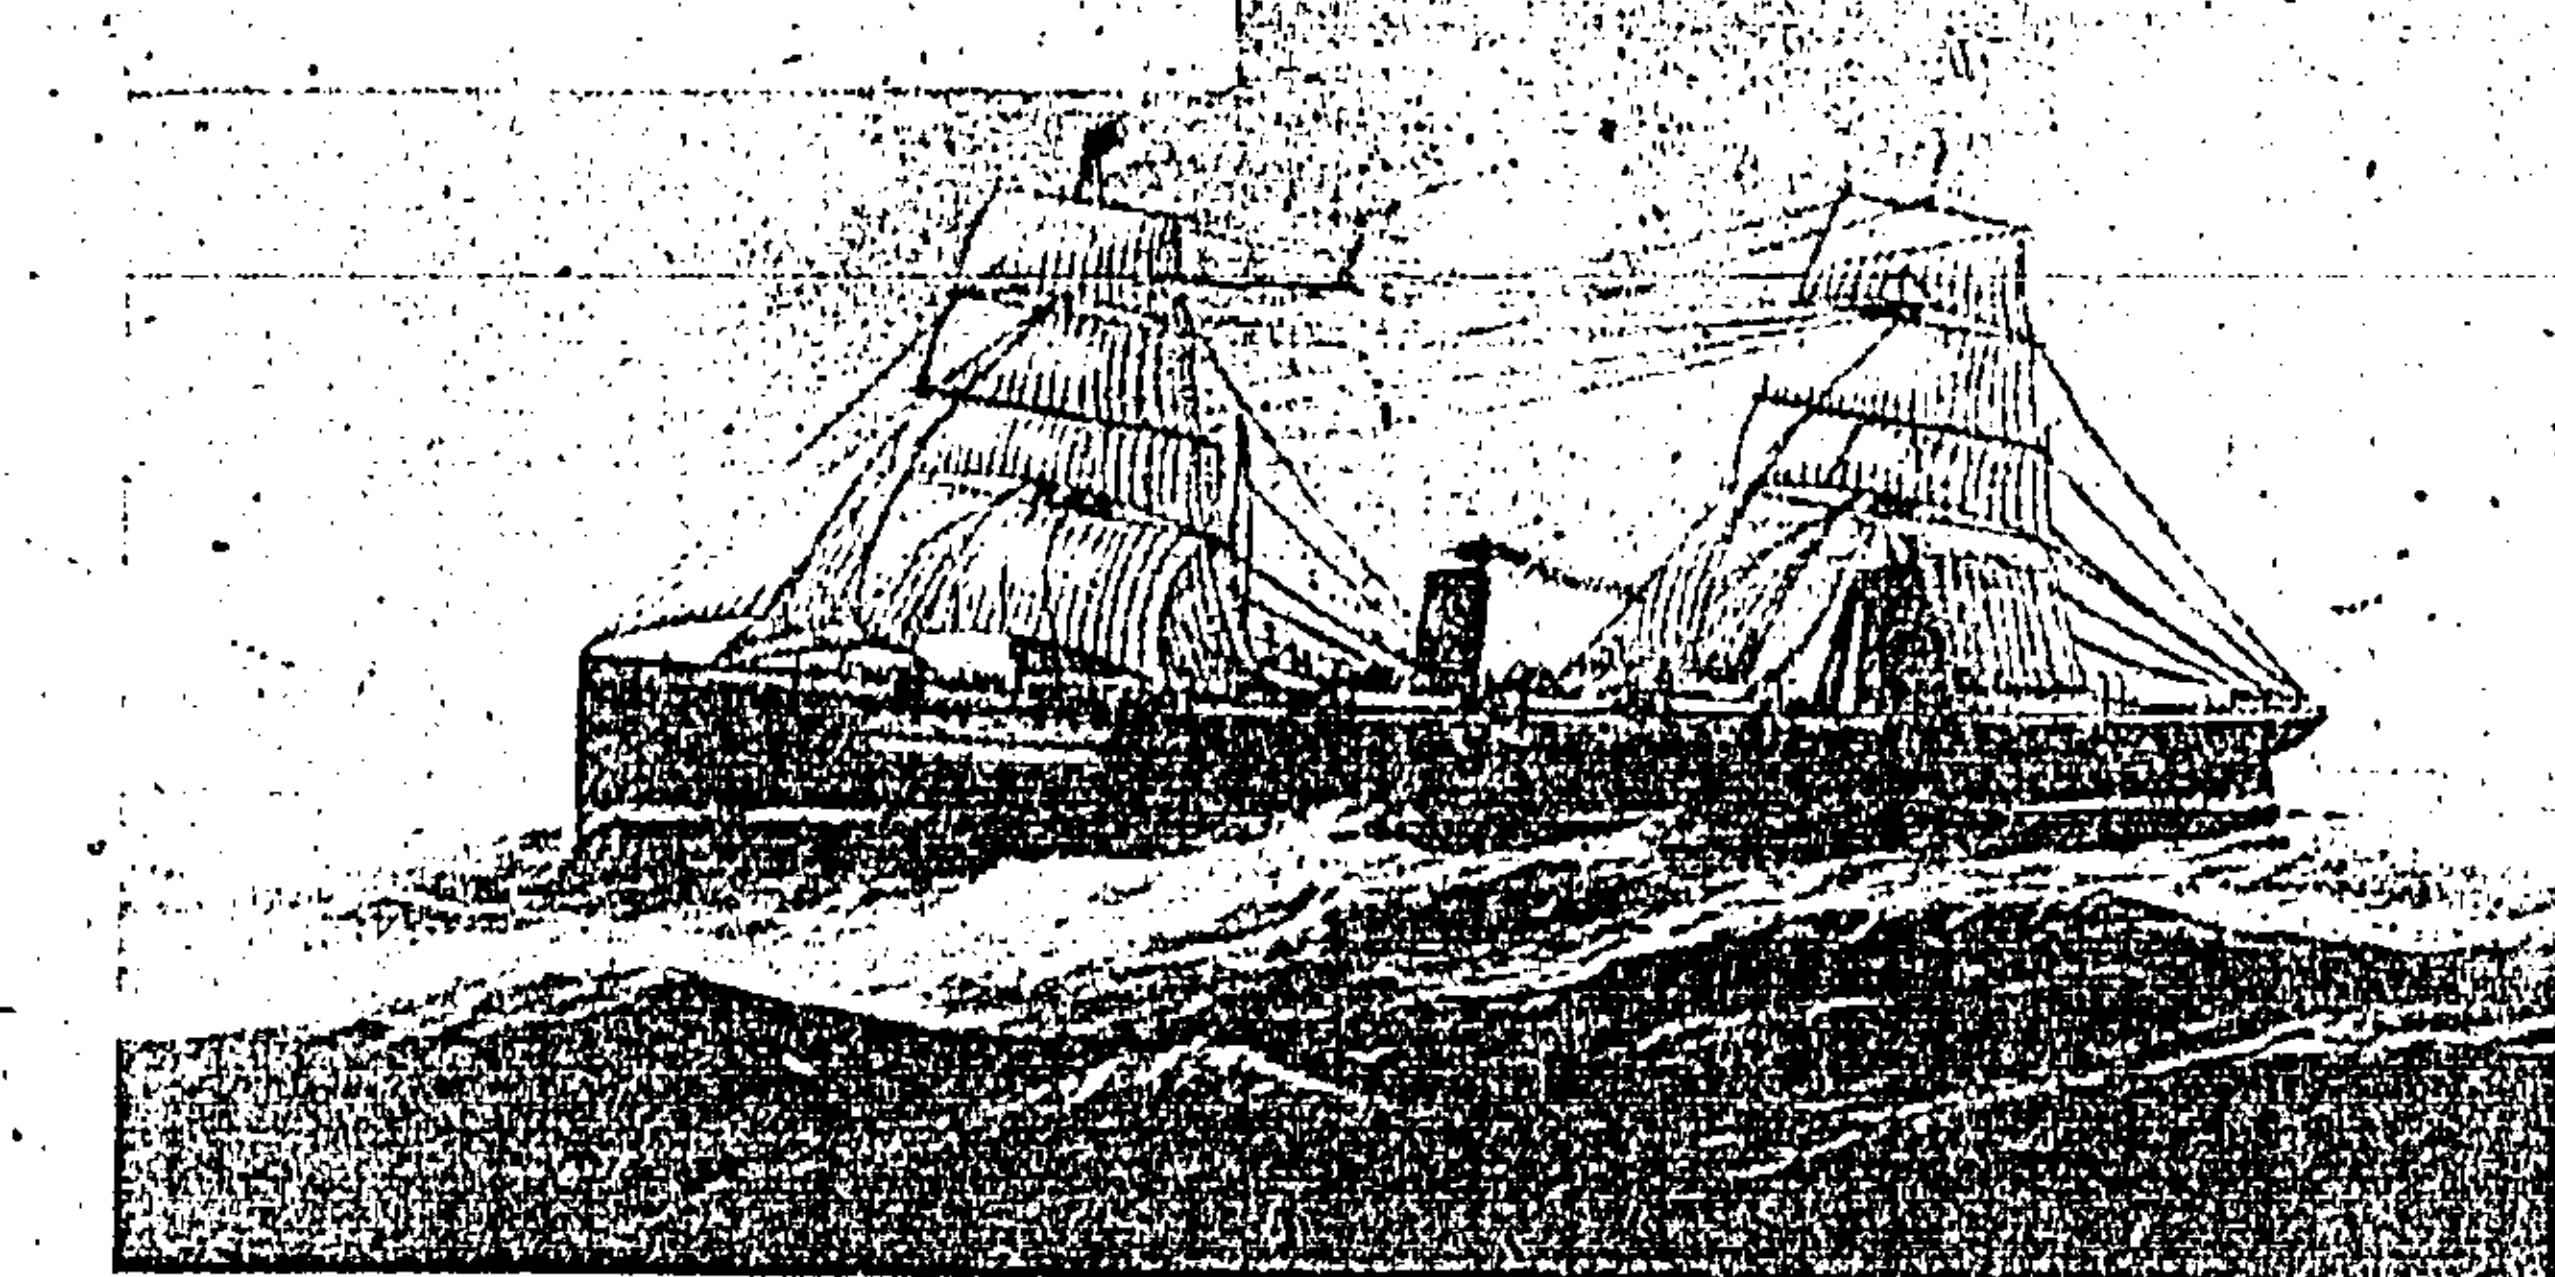

Above—A recent photograph of the new N.D.L. liner Potsdam, now on the Far Eastern Service. Right—The first N.D.L. liner to visit Hongkong. The steamer Oder arrived here in 1886.

THE existence of the N.D.L. goes back as far as 1857, when enterprising Bremen merchants, after small beginnings in river-shipping on the Weser, founded the NDL as overseas shipping company plying between Europe and America.

During the first thirty years of the development, when many a setback had to be overcome, the N.D.L. already extended its services—especially to America. As early as 1878 the first express steamers—which at that time had still to be built in England—were put into operation, vessels, which in those years were ranking in the first place of international shipping.

In 1882 the N.D.L. could look back on 25 years of existence, when their fleet consisted of almost hundred vessels totalling 100,000 B.R.T.

New prospects for a considerable extension of its shipping lines arose in the middle of the eighties, when the Reichs-entrusted Fugate Bismarck to Co., China, and Messrs. Ahrens arrive at an agreement with a & Co., Japan. The four vessels of the regular Imperial mail-steamer service to the Far East—years, followed by the three sister-ships "Preussen," "Bayern," "Sachsen" each of about 5,000 B.R.T. and 4,000 H.P. for 15 years. On June 30th 1886 the first Imperial mail-ship, "Luebeck" and "Danzig" served as carriers in the Far East.

In 1892 the service was further supplemented by the s.s. "Prinz Heinrich" and "Prinz Regent Luitpold." Vessels of the "Weimer" type were occasionally also engaged on the Far Eastern run.

IN the beginning of the 20th century this service was operated by the vessels of the "Feldherren" type such as s.s. "Zieten," "Seydlitz," "Roon," and "Scharnhorst," which later on were followed by a somewhat bigger type such as the s.s. "Buelow," "Goeben," "York," "Luetzow" and "Derfflinger." After some of the latter vessels were passed on to the Australian service, they were substituted by s.s. "Prinzess Alice," "Prinz Eitel Friedrich" and "Prinz Ludwig."

Besides the Far East Mail-steamer service which developed in the meantime to its full extent, the Norddeutscher Lloyd, was by no means a simple one, since it called upon them to embody in their service two parts of the earth, with which they had not maintained regular connections prior to the year 1886. However, thanks to the help of a number of their Agencies abroad they succeeded in doing so, and it is interesting to know that of those very Agencies four are still in existence, after serving the Company for fifty years; they are the following: Messrs. Freudenberg & Co. (The Hanseatic Trading Co.), of Ceylon; Messrs. Behn, Meyer & Co., of Singapore; Messrs. Melchers &

all, only in home coast shipping. Gradually the fleet could be increased by smaller new constructions and re-purchases of former German ships, and with these the services were taken up again on the most important routes. The Far East service was inaugurated again in March 1922 by the freighter "Westfalen," which was followed by further monthly sailings. Beginning in January of the following year, an interim passenger-freight service was opened with the s.s. "Werra" and "Werra," which in 1923 were joined by the 4 vessels of the "Saarbruecken" type and the pre-war mail steamer "Derfflinger."

In addition to the existing fortnightly mail steamer service with passenger vessels, a regular freight service already in 1914 was taken up, and it is for this reason that after the war the main attention was directed to the freight service, first of all owing to the fact that suitable vessels for the passenger trade were then not available. Until the beginning of 1920 freight vessels of that year the type of the freighters was considerably improved by inauguration of the express-freighters, "Lahn" and "Mosel." Another ten steamers and three motor-vessels of this type were added to the Far Eastern fleet in the course of the next years, and all these vessels have proven to be a great success.

SINCE everything necessary for the modernisation of the freight service had been done by putting these vessels into commission, the out-of-date type of the "Saarbruecken" class was felt to hamper the passenger trade and means had to be found to build new ships, which would meet present-day requirements of first class passenger vessels. Years went by without any results in this respect and only with the prospering of Germany under the National Socialist Regime it was possible to bring up new initiative and courage resulting in the three express liners "Scharnhorst," "Polestar" and "Gneisenau," which are already well known and very popular amongst passengers as well as shippers. These vessels represent a type which will for a long time answer all requirements of up-to-date passenger and freight traffic between the Far East and Europe.

The Celebrations of the Jubilee of the N.D.L., Bremen, are shared by Messrs. Behn, Meyer & Co., who have been Agents for the Line since the last 50 years.

Anglo-Soviet Entente Nearing Realisation

STRONGER RELATIONS TO OFFSET FAR EAST "MENACE"

Washington, June 21.

STRENGTHENING of relations between Great Britain and Soviet Russia, each believing its interests to be menaced by Japanese expansion in the Far East, is pointed to by diplomatic observers as one of the most interesting moves in the world's political chess game.

According to reliable reports, private British bankers, acting with the knowledge of the foreign office, have nearly completed negotiations for a direct loan to the Soviet government. Although the British previously have granted Russia credits, it is understood this will be the first actual loan to be arranged between London and Moscow. Receipts of the loan will be used primarily to purchase goods in the British market.

At the same time, the British government is opening negotiations to draw Russia into the London Naval pact, already signed by the United States, Britain and France. The treaty, while not limiting the number of ships—except heavy cruisers—which a nation may build, does restrict the tonnage of individual vessels. More, it provides for a full and frank exchange of information between the powers as to their yearly building programmes.

If, as expected, Russia does subscribe to the treaty, it will have a significance deeper than would appear on the surface. The Russians for years have been extraordinarily secretive about their naval programme.

Foreign naval attaches in Moscow have been unable to obtain anything but the most general information about the Soviet's strength on the seas.

SECRET BURIAL AT 'ABODE OF LOVE'

SMYTH-PIGOTT'S WIDOW

Taunton, June 8.

WITH impressive rites held in great secrecy Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, widow of John Hugh Smyth-Pigott, the former leader of the Agapemones sect, was buried at the sect's "Abode of Love" at Spaxton, near here, today.

All who took part in the ceremony were sworn to secrecy, but a village workman who was in the vicinity of the burial was carried out with elaborate ritual.

Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, who was 85 and had been in ill-health for some time, was buried in the private cemetery in the grounds, where, with similar secrecy, her husband was buried in 1927.

The burial was preceded by a service in the private chapel conducted by the present principal of the colony, Mr. Douglas Robinson, a Quaker. Smyth-Pigott was a clergyman of the Church of England who was unfrocked for immorality. When he was pastor of the Agapemones church at Clapton in 1902 he made the startling announcement that he was the "Messiah."

MOBBED BY CROWDS

Crowds mobbed him outside the church and he was forced to retire to the "Abode of Love" which had been founded by James Henry Prince.

With him went his legal wife and Sister Ruth, an attractive young woman who was styled his spiritual bride and to whom three children were born. She also is buried in the grounds at Spaxton.

Mrs. Smyth-Pigott, formerly Miss Catherine Reynolds, was the sister of the Rev. A. P. Reynolds, formerly vicar of Kingsley, Cheshire, and now living in the Isle of Arran. She married Smyth-Pigott in 1886.

There are now about 70 members of the sect at the "Abode of Love," most of them women. There have been few new recruits to the faith in recent years.

The oldest member, Mrs. Eleanor Giles, aged 101, died in February, and she was buried in part of the village churchyard reserved for the sect.

Two traitors have received heavy sentences from the People's Court for seeking information for a foreign Power on the strength of the German forces in East Prussia and Silesia.

The judge stated that Steinhoff must be guilty in over 100 cases. He had abused his high office and brought disgrace on State and Church.

The charges against others of the accused comprise attempted murder, seduction, brutality and offences against weak-minded and infirm persons.—Reuter.

ROOSEVELT AS PRESIDENT

Only Man who can Carry on Party Programme

Philadelphia, June 24.

Nomination of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, thirty-second president of the United States, as candidate of the Democratic party for a second term in the White House, was consistent with both partisan and national political situation.

Within his party, President Roosevelt by aggressive leadership and systematic organisation efforts, had established a personal control probably without precedent among Democratic chief executives of the last half-century.

After 1934, he had better than two-thirds of the representatives and the Senate. James A. Farley, labouring simultaneously as Postmaster-general and chairman of the Democratic National committee, built a powerful political machine committed to the support of President Roosevelt.

PARTY OPPOSITION

The serious intra-party opposition to his control came from relative conservative elements which thought the "New Deal" economic policies were inconsistent with the history of the Democratic party and the platform pledges of 1932. Pre-convention tests of the party sentiment indicated that Democrats of this opinion were in the minority.

Political tradition has decreed that an incumbent president shall be given an opportunity to run for a second term. This traditional claim was strengthened when primary elections in many states gave a strong party mandate for President Roosevelt.

From a national standpoint, it was logical that President Roosevelt should be named by the Democrats to seek re-election. Probably no peace-time president ever faced more acute or varied economic and social problems. Although the solution of these problems was frequently of controversial method or result, friends and foe conceded to the White House occupant an extraordinary energy and determination and a first-rate capacity as a political strategist.

BANKING CRISIS

President Roosevelt entered the White House March 4, 1933, when the country was in the midst of a severe banking crisis. On the next day he proclaimed a national banking holiday and commenced a series of extraordinary emergency measures which stayed the panic and gave to his administration an extraordinary impetus of popular confidence and political support.

Congress granted President Roosevelt broad emergency powers with respect to money and banking, and very flexible enabling acts affecting industry and agriculture. Within a year there developed a system of new executive agencies, such as the National Recovery Administration, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, the Public Works Administration and the Farm Credit Administration, of which the administration involved a high degree of control by executive branch of the government and the expenditure or loan of huge sums of money.

MONK'S AMAZING CONFESSION IMMORAL CONDUCT CHARGE AGAINST 276

Coblentz, June 24.

A monk's confession that he had led a double life since 1929 and had seduced minors who came to him for lessons and confessions, as well as other members of his Order, was the feature of the mass trial which opened here today of 276 members of the Franciscan Order.

The monks, who belong to a number of monasteries in Westphalia and the Rhineland, are charged with immoral offences.

They are being tried in small batches and it is anticipated that the proceedings will last several months.

Sixty-one other Franciscans escaped arrest by leaving the country.

After formal evidence had been given today the proceedings were continued in camera, although the Press were admitted.

"DEEPLY PENITENT"

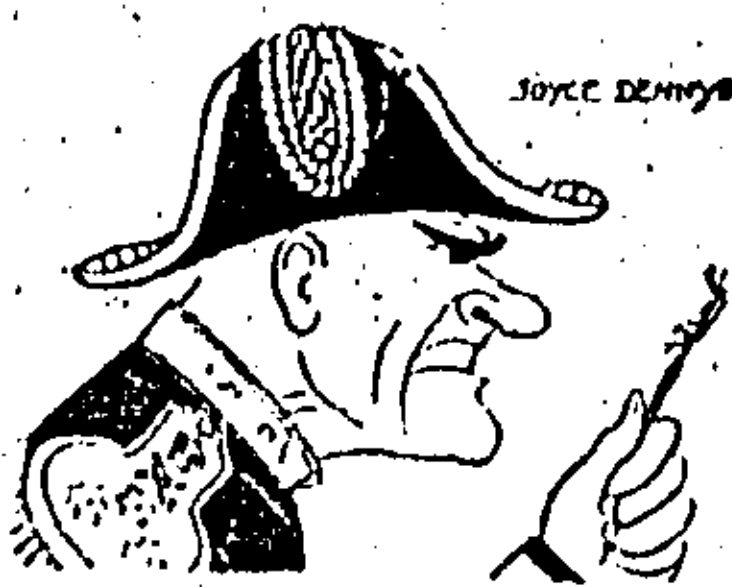

The first prisoner heard was the 46-year-old monk Bernhard Steinhoff, known as Brother Leovigil, who was charged with 12 cases of immoral conduct. Steinhoff said that he confessed to everything and was deeply penitent.

Brother Robert Ankerer, who gave evidence, said that since 1929 he had been the secretary of the Franciscan Brotherhood.

RANDALL TAKES WITNESS STAND IN OWN DEFENCE

leased from the dock and they immediately left the Court.

Regarding the case against Randall, Mr. Sheldon decided to put his client in the witness-box.

In evidence, Randall stated that the reason why he took part in the matter was because he wanted to gain as much information as he could about heroin and opium in Hongkong. This information he was to pass to the Treasury Department of the United States. That was his sole object.

Mr. Sheldon: Have you in fact, in the past, given various information to officers of the United States Treasury Department concerning morphine, heroin and opium in Hongkong?

Randall: I have given them reports.

REPORTS TO H.K.

Witness also identified reports which were produced by the defence as some of those which he had made to the U.S. Treasury Department. He also stated that he passed certain information to the Hongkong Government on opium and illicit drugs.

Mr. Sheldon: And did you intend from beginning to the end to make a cent for yourself out of opium in the Colony? Not for a moment did I intend that in mind.

Continuing his evidence, Randall said he was interviewed by the two Revenue officers, Tam Wei and Tsang Cheung on March 20 at his house. A man named Li Chim went up together with the Revenue officers. Witness knew this man as one who dealt in opium on a fairly big scale in Hongkong.

Mr. Sheldon: Now the two officers say they don't know Li Chim and that he didn't accompany them to your house. That is untrue.

Did you telephone Mo Kang? No. Not on March 20 or any other time?

Cross-examined by Mr. Williams regarding the statement which he made on being charged, Randall asked to be allowed to make an alteration regarding being introduced to Tam Wei and Tsang Cheung. He said that before March 20, he had never seen these men before.

TALKED IN A HURRY

He explained his mistake by saying that at the time he was arrested, he was asked to make a statement. He telephoned his solicitor and was advised not to make any statement. Before his solicitor got to the station, he had agreed to make a statement. At the time his mind was "pretty blank" and the statement was made in a hurry.

Mr. Williams: Did the inspection say to you that you were not under any obligation to make a statement? But I wished to make a statement.

Yet you made that statement, and now you say that part of it is untrue? It is true that I never knew Tam Wei before March 20.

In answer to another question, witness said the rest of his statement was correct.

Describing the visit paid to him by two Revenue Officers at his house, Randall said they were accompanied by a man named Li Chim. He was sick at the time and was in bed. Li Chim asked the two Revenue Officers to sit down and he introduced them to witness. Witness remembered that one of them was Tam Wei, who told him to ring up Mo Kang at the Revenue Department as soon as he had recovered from his illness.

MIGHT HAVE FORGOTTEN

Mr. Williams: That is very important, but you have not mentioned it in your statement. I might have forgotten.

Witness said he wanted to know what Mo Kang wanted him for and was told by Tam Wei that Mo Kang had something of great importance to talk over with him.

The next day he told Leung Yau, who had gone up to see him, that Mo Kang wanted to see the two of them. Leung Yau asked: "I wonder what it is all about." Randall told him he didn't know and added: "You had better find out."

A few days after witness had recovered from his illness, Leung Yau told him to go to the Sun Koi Yuen Restaurant to see Mo Kang. He understood that it was Mo Kang who made the appointment to go to the Sun Koi Yuen Restaurant.

Mr. Williams: Did you say you had appointed people to collect money from divans? I didn't say I had appointed people to collect money nor did I say money had been collected.

No mention was made of money already collected? No mention was made of money already collected.

Was there any mention of money to be collected? Yes.

Who mentioned it?—Tam Wei or Mo Kang mentioned it. I don't remember who.

In the course of conversation, witness said Tam Wei or Mo Kang asked them whether they wished to collect money from divans. "We said that it was possible that we could do so if the Revenue Department gave their co-operation," he added.

Mr. Williams: Which one of you said that?—That was in the course of conversation. Anyone of us might have said it.

Was there no mention of a division of the money into three parts? There was only general conversation at the Sun Koi Yuen Restaurant. Nothing definite was proposed.

MONEY FOR OFFICERS

Regarding the meeting at the Chin Emporium, Mr. Williams asked what the object of the meeting was. Witness replied that the meeting was arranged by Mo Kang who had asked them to arrange for fixed sums to be paid to the Revenue Officers at the end of each month.

Mr. Williams: What was the sum arranged?—$500.

Who suggested it?—Mo Kang. Witness also stated that Li Yick asked him to lend him $500 and one

MURPHY TO CONTEST ELECTION IF FRIENDS HAVE THEIR WAY

Washington, June 29. Observers here to-day saw indications that Mr. Frank Murphy, former Governor of the Philippine Islands, might yield to his friends' importunities and seek the Governorship of Michigan state, following conferences with President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Although he sought to avoid political questions, Mr. Murphy admitted, when interviewed, that he would make a decision with respect to the gubernatorial election within the next four or five days.

"I have discussed the Michigan situation thoroughly with the President," he said.

He drew attention to the fact that he would not return to the Philippines if he decides to run for the governorship of Michigan, but he also made it clear that conferences with the President to-day had been mainly concerned with important Philippine problems, requiring early action, and which would be discussed at Washington during the next few days, he added.

If Mr. Murphy decides to run—and there is a feeling in White House circles that he will—observers draw attention to his popularity which will tend to draw to the Democratic ticket much strength lying at present in the camp of Father Coughlin.

It is recalled that, up to now, Mr. Murphy has had the active support of Father Coughlin.

Mr. Murphy, questioned as to Michigan's political leanings, merely remarked: "The President will carry Michigan in November." — United Press.

of the reasons why he went to Macao was to borrow the money.

Questioned regarding the notebooks with the addresses, witness said they contained information which was of interest to the United States Treasury.

Mr. Williams: Do you mean to say that an opium divan in Third Street or Savatow Lane would be of interest to the Treasury Department of the United States? Not the name, or address, perhaps, but the number of divans in Hongkong would be.

Were you out to make money?—I was in the conspiracy; not to make money but to get all the information I could get from the Revenue Officers and from the second and third defendants.

Regarding the word "Rob", witness said it was never mentioned as a pass word for any divan in Hongkong.

Mr. A. J. Campbell, officer of the United States Treasury Department, said that part of his duties in Hongkong was to inquire into and prevent, as far as possible, the importation of dangerous drugs into the United States.

Witness said he had seen Randall at the office for the purpose of receiving rewards.

Mr. Sheldon: An informer, in fact?—Yes.

Shown a pile of reports, witness was asked whether these were the reports made to him by Randall. He said he could not be sure without referring to his records. Witness agreed that certain information received from Randall had been passed on to the Hongkong Government.

ADDRESS OF NO USE
In reply to Mr. Williams, Mr. Campbell said the address on the notebooks produced in Court were of no use to the U.S. Treasury Department. He said some of the reports made by Randall were torn up and thrown away, some given to the Hongkong Government and others transmitted to the United States.

Evidence was also given by Tam Wei, an opium and heroin dealer, who, by then employed by the Randall family, that the man Li Chim accompanied the two Revenue Officers to the house on March 20.

Miss Rita Randall, sister of the accused, testified that she once answered a telephone call and said that a man named Li Chim wanted to see her brother.

Both the second and third defendants also went into the box and stated that they knew nothing of the matter.

The case is proceeding.

BOGUS BROADCAST FROM LINER

AMERICAN COMPANY'S "SCOOP"

New York, June 18. Bitter rivalry between American broadcasting companies resulted in the B.B.C. being "scooped" on the arrival of the liner Mary in New York.

George Blake and John Snaggs, of the B.B.C., waiting before microphones on the sun deck ready to tell British listeners about the liner's arrival, never received the signal "go ahead."

Believing there had been a technical hitch George Blake prepared to carry on with the second item in the prearranged programme—a two-way conversation with New York City.

To his amazement he found that the National Broadcasting Company had taken over all the channels to England and was giving British listeners a "canned" account of the Queen Mary's arrival following a script prepared before the liner had arrived.

Prime Minister had been informed in advance of the intention to deliver them.

In passages in the War Minister's speech to which attention was in particular directed Mr. Duff Cooper was reported as saying that the ideals of France and Britain and their frontiers were in mortal danger, adding that France's frontiers were Britain's frontiers.

In the absence of Mr. Baldwin the series of questions were answered by the Deputy Leader, Sir John Simon. He recalled the circumstances in which the Secretary for War's speech was delivered and added that his remarks were not a declaration of policy, but the speech devoted to stressing elements common to the people of both countries. The place for declaration of Government policy was, of course, the House of Commons and that policy was fully stated in the House by the Foreign Secretary and the Prime Minister in the course of the debates of June 18 and 23.

The observations of the Secretary for War were not designed to be in conflict with those declarations at all. He added that Mr. Duff Cooper submitted a draft of his speech to the Foreign Office and subsequently altered it in certain respects, in response to their suggestions. In its final form, the speech did not come under the personal notice of the Foreign Secretary, but that was, due to pressure of other engagements, and was not intentional.

LABOUR MOTION

In reply to supplementary questions, including one by the Conservative, Sir Arnold Wilson, who suggested that such pronouncements caused real confusion and alarm among supporters of the Government, Sir John Simon said he could not admit that the War Minister's remarks called for these strictures. He repeated that it was not a declaration of Government policy.

At the close of questions, the Labour Leader, Mr. Attlee, moved the adjournment of the House to call attention to "the action of the Secretary for War in making, in a foreign country immediately before the meeting of the Assembly of the League, public pronouncements which conflicted with the declared policy of the Government and treaty obligations by which this country is bound."

The motion was accepted and the debate is now proceeding.—British Wireless.

Headaches On The Increase, Speed of Living Blamed.

An eminent medical authority states that headaches are on the increase, and he attributes this to the "speeding up" which is so marked a feature of such a hurry to get things rapidly to climb socially and to fill our lives with so many things, that we never get sufficient rest," he says.

What the learned doctor means, of course, is that these headaches are mostly due to nerve strain. But unfortunately few of us can relax to do so, we fear, would mean falling behind in the race. So the only course is to watch our nerves, and our general health, keeping both tuned up to high efficiency.

Since the nerves—the brain, the stomach, and all other parts of the human body, are dependent upon the blood for nourishment, it is only by means of good, rich, red blood that we can restore them, when run-down, to healthy activity. And to do this it is wise to seek the aid without delay of a high-grade, reliable blood and nerve tonic, such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which impart, among other helpful things, fresh supplies of that all-important strengthening element, iron, to the blood at every dose, thus revitalizing the nervous system, restoring strength to the digestion, and imparting a joyous sense of renewed vigour and health.

Equally good for men and women, old and young, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a record of over fifty years' world service behind them, so you can feel confident that what they have done for others they will do for you. Obtainable from chemists everywhere; begin your cure to-day.

RODE RACE IN A TANK WITH A QUEEN

Colonel Who Married His Nurse Dies in Paris
CHINESE CALLED HIM "WHITE DEVIL WITH GOOD HEART BUT BAD TEMPER"

COLONEL EDWARD BRYCE, winner of the D.S.O. and two bars for gallantry during the war, a famous tank battalion commander, has died in Paris at the age of 56.

Two years ago the colonel, a powerfully built man, was stricken with paralysis. For a year he lay gravely ill. He was nursed back to health by Miss Erica Fromen, an Australian nurse, whom he married in February this year.

Before the marriage there was a case in the Paris courts, in which the Colonel's sister, Mrs. Phillips, of Whitechapel, London, lodged a protest against the proposed marriage on the ground that her brother was paralysed and unfit to make such a decision.

Colonel Bryce was represented in court by Mlle. Yvonne Netter, a leading woman barrister. Mrs. Phillips' protest was rejected.

PROSPECTED FOR GOLD
Edward Daniel Bryce, the son of a Devonshire J.P. and of a South American mother, had had an adventurous career. Educated at Cambridge, he went to a grammar at Canterbury to prepare for an army career.

Before he was 18 he had left the grammar for Chile and Peru, where he began prospecting for gold at a height of 8,000 ft.

A year or two later he transferred his activities to the Malay States. He was one of the rubber pioneers in the State of Johore and was perhaps the Englishman who best understood the joys of the rubber tree.

They had a common interest in racing, the colonel was a great figure on the Singapore turf.

A man of powerful physique, he had a violent temper combined with the most generous disposition in the world. The Chinese put up a notice outside his bungalow in Johore. It stood there for months until the colonel took the trouble to ask what it meant. The translation was: "This white devil has a good heart but a bad temper."

By 1910 he had made a considerable fortune in rubber, part of which he lost in the subsequent slump.

THE War gave him his big chance. He had always wanted to be a soldier, and when tanks came in, he found his métier. He became a tank commander under General Monash, for whom he formed an immense admiration. The Australian general knew how to handle him—not as a caddy, matter—and gave him more or less a free hand.

Bryce's methods in attack were always the same. He insisted on leading his tanks into action walking outside them on foot.

The late King Albert, the Queen of the Belgians and the present King of the Belgians once went to inspect his tanks.

Bryce put each of them into separate tanks and made them race. He took the Queen himself. The Queen's tank won.

A PICAPOLE MEMORY
Bryce was a great leader of men and as fearless as he was kind. I remember walking with him during the war in Piccadilly-circus. Suddenly he saw an officer on crutches trying to cross the street. The traffic looked threatening. "Gosh, that's

AUSTRIA WORRIED BY REICH MACHINE

Vienna, June 28.
Alarms of invasion by Hitler's mighty military machine keep the frontier zone between Austria and Germany in a periodical state of nerves, but life along the border is nevertheless not without light diversion.

Over an area stretching two hundred and fifty miles, from the Swiss frontier to the edge of Czechoslovakia, armed guards who speak the same language and who fought side by side in the World War as comrades glare hatred and defiance at each other.

On one side of the frontier in Germany, followers of Hitler are heroes. If they cross the border south, they wave a Swastika or cry "Heil Hitler!" they are bundled off to concentration camps or locked up in one of the prison fortresses in Austria.

The automobilist in Germany always flies a swastika from his car to show he is a good Nazi. But as soon as the Austrian border is reached, if he wishes to cross, he must tear down the flag and hide it. Possession of the Nazi insignia in Austria means arrest.

NAZI SALUTE BARRED

Raising of the arm in the Hitler salute is automatic in Germany, as is the "Heil" slogan. But the absent-minded Nazi who stops on to Austria and forgets his geographical position finds himself in the custody of a cop or a gendarme if he gives the National-Socialist greeting.

What is proud patriotism in Germany is rank treason in Austria. On the German side, Nazi Swastikas fly from every house. Every customs frontier along the northern edge of the border bears the words, "The only greeting we want is 'Heil Hitler!'"

Austrians going into Germany must ignore both the flags and the Hitler salute, unless they want to be under suspicion as Nazis when they return again to their homeland.

CRAZY FRONTIER

A crazier frontier could only have been devised in "Alice in Wonderland." On the day of the celebration of the 10th anniversary of the National-Socialist Revolution in the Third Reich an unusual abundance of swastikas float in the breeze on the German side, opposite Braunau.

Herr Hitler was born in the village of Braunau. But no Nazi flag adorns the little house where the ruler of Germany saw the light of day, because Braunau is in Austrian soil. If the frontier line had swerved a few kilometres south at this point, Adolf Hitler would have been German-born.

The military and gendarmes guard along the length of the Austrian-German frontier is probably the strictest in Europe, excepting some borders in the Balkans where the traveller often finds barbed wire barring his progress between countries.

NAZI PROPAGANDA

Austrians who go to Germany are closely searched for Nazi propaganda, while Germans go through a grilling to establish the purpose of their visits to Austria. They are doubly suspect if they carry much money. Nazi gold is feared in Austria.

It may be used to pay Austrian Nazis who help them in their underground fight against the Schuschnigg Government, which proclaims National Socialism as the mortal enemy of this country.

Despite the restrictions at the frontier posts for Germans and Austrians, thousands of workpeople cross on one side to the other daily to earn their livelihood.

"FORGET" HITLER

The German labourers who are Nazis either by faith or persuasion must forget about Hitler while they are at work in Austria during the day, while the Austrians who cross to day, they are labouring under the sign of the swastika.

All along the Austrian side of the border, watchfulness is the motto. The Austrian Government keeps alert, because it professes it never knows what to expect from the Nazi Reich.

Spy-glasses scan the fields and valleys and mountains for signs of military activity in Germany or for a trace of the almost mythical Austrian Legion.

These men, numbering between 5,000 and 8,000, are Austrian Nazis who fled to Germany and banded themselves together pledged to fight for the Nazification of their native land.

They are supposed to be concentrated just beyond the border ready, so it is said, for the opportune time to march south to help to achieve their dearest patriotic wish.

Jilted Lover Shoots Wealthy Bridegroom

Warsaw, June 20.

ANNA GALIKOWNA, seventeen-year-old dairy-maid, of Sienkiew, a village near Warsaw, met and fell in love with peasant boy Franz Wasilewski, aged twenty, and agreed to marry him.

One day handsome Stanislaw Pinsecki, twenty-five-year-old son of a neighbouring landowner, rode through the village. Anna saw him; later met him.

They fell in love and she forgot her peasant lover. A week ago she told friends that she was going to marry Stanislaw to-day.

This morning, Franz, maddened by jealousy, borrowed an old gun from a friend and, hiding himself behind a hedge, watched Stanislaw, dressed in Sunday clothes, riding to the village church for his wedding.

He shot him dead, bound him to his own horse, and drove it galloping towards the church.

LAUGHTER FROZE
Wedding guests shouted and cheered as they saw the figures appearing in the distance. But their laughter froze when they noticed the lifeless body of the bridegroom in the saddle.

Anna collapsed and is now in hospital, suffering from a breakdown. Franz awaits trial on a charge of murder.

SEQUEL TO A ROYAL ROMANCE

WITH a royal envoy hot on their heels, Princess Azah, 29-year-old sister of King Ghazi of Iraq, dashed by air yesterday from Athens to the island of Rhodes with her handsome young husband, formerly an hotel porter.

Following their secret marriage at Kephissia, near Athens, they are spending their honeymoon on the island at the Hotel des Roses, where the 25-year-old bridegroom, Anastasios Charalambis, used to earn his living and where he met the princess.

They have taken a suite of rooms and announced that they intend to spend a long honeymoon, keep much to themselves, and have most of their meals in their apartments.

Meanwhile, Reuters' Baghdad correspondent reports that King Ghazi's Master of Ceremonies has hurriedly left the Court at Baghdad to investigate the marriage.

King Ghazi had given his approval to the princess's journey to Europe, because she was in a nervous state of health.

CHAPERONED
The King insisted, however, that she should be accompanied by her sister, Princess Rajiha, two ladies-in-waiting, and a Palace official.

Arrangements had been made for Princess Azah to have a course of medical treatment in Vienna.

Although news of the romance has startled the world, the public in Iraq know nothing about it. No reports of the marriage have been published in the princess's home country.

She fell in love at first sight with Charalambis when visiting Rhodes about a year ago.

The young porter, who had risen rapidly from a position as under-waiter, acted as guide to the princess and her party.

Later, they met again at Baghdad. Then came the day when she exercised her royal prerogative and asked the lowly Greek porter to be her husband. He accepted.

The princess was married to him after he had been baptised a Christian by the Greek Orthodox Church. "I am now Mrs. Charalambis," she stated. "I am not a princess any more."

But the princess's sister, alarmed, had followed her to the Greek capital. She discovered that the marriage had taken place, and immediately began to make every effort to have it annulled.

POLICE REFUSE TO ACT
She found out where the couple were staying and visited them with M. Katrassas, Chief of the Greek "Scotland Yard."

The couple produced their marriage certificate, and M. Katrassas then explained to Princess Rajiha that the police could take no action since the marriage complied with all legal requirements.

Princess Rajiha also called upon the Greek State Attorney, who refused to take any action to have the marriage annulled.

In a last desperate attempt the princess then lodged a complaint against the couple involving a charge that they had been keeping a charge of 50,000 and £1,500 in cash.

The police established, however, that the jewels were Princess Azah's share of the family heirlooms, and the charge was withdrawn.

The princess, who has a private income of £400 a month, is regarded by Moslems as a direct descendant of the Prophet Mahomet.

YOUTH SLASHES YOUNG GIRL

THOUGHT SHE WAS ASSAULTING HIM

While squinting by the sidewalk near the Yau-mat market about 8 a.m. yesterday, Leung Kwai-chuen, aged 16, a girl, accidentally pushed the elbow of Wong Chiu, aged 17, unemployed.

The lad accused the girl of assaulting him and snatched a knife she was then holding in her hand and cut her right hand with it.

He was brought before Mr. Macdougall at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning, charged with causing grievous bodily harm to the girl by assaulting her, and was remanded for 48 hours for medical opinion as to age.

Detective-Sergeant J. Hunter was in charge of the case.

Austin Sweeps Through To A Majestic Victory

"BUNNY" AUSTIN

BRILLIANT WIN BY FRAULEIN HORN

WOMEN'S LAST 8

Not for many years has there been such an international flavour about the last eight of the women's singles championship at Wimbledon. Yesterday six players qualified to join Miss Helen Jacobs and Miss Dorothy Round in the quarter-finals as a result of which the following countries will be represented in the fourth round:

England (2), America, Poland, Denmark, Germany, France and Poland.

The brilliant form of Mme. Sperling yesterday, which according to Reuters allowed her to beat Miss Nellie Adamson the Anglo-Belgian in 20 minutes, means that Miss Round will have a difficult time when they meet in the next round.

Nevertheless Miss Jacobs is in the hardest section. She has first to dispose of Senorita Anita-Lizana the Chilean champion before going on to meet either Miss Stammers or Mme. Jedzejowska in the semi-final.

If Miss Round survives her quarter-final engagement she will play either Mme. Mathieu or Fri. Marie Horn.

The draw for the quarter-finals is as follows:

Miss Jacobs (U.S.A.) v. Senorita A. Lizana (Chile) Miss Stammers (England) v. Mme. Jedzejowska (Poland) Mme. Mathieu (France) v. Fri. Marie Horn (Germany) Mme. Sperling (Denmark) v. Miss D. Round (England).

YESTERDAY'S MATCHES

The players are extremely well matched, but it is expected that the semi-finalists will be Miss Jacobs, Mme. Jedzejowska, Mme. Mathieu and Miss Round.

WOMEN'S LAST EIGHT

Fred J. Perry (England) the holder, Donald Budge (U.S.A.), Henry W. ("Bunny") Austin (England) and Baron Gottfried Von Cramm (Germany) are the semi-finalists in the men's singles championship at Wimbledon. This was forecast exclusively in the Telegraph yesterday, but the unexpected feature of the matches was that all were finished in three straight sets—probably another Wimbledon record.

Biggest triumphs were those of Austin over Wilmer Allison the American, and Von Cramm against Jack Crawford, Australian ace. It was a black day for Australia. Adrian Quist also took the K.O. Donald Budge, his Davis Cup conqueror being responsible. It was a fine day for England, while America had the consolation of seeing Budge advance in the face of defeat of Bryan Grant and Allison.

According to United Press the following were the scores in the four matches:

F. J. Perry beat B. Grant 6-4, 6-3.

D. Budge beat A. Quist 6-2, 6-4.

H. W. Austin beat W. Allison 6-4, 6-1.

G. Von Cramm beat J. Crawford 6-1, 7-5, 6-4.

The semi-finals will be played on Wednesday, the draw being:

Perry versus Budge

Austin versus Von Cramm

The final will be played on Friday as is customary, Saturday being set aside for the women's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles finals.

REPETITION PROMISED

A repetition of last year's men's final—Perry v. Von Cramm—is indicated, but there is no gainsaying that chances of an all-English final have been considerably improved in consequence of Austin's magnificent display against Allison.

Singles, says a Reuters message, were:

Miss Mathieu (France) beat Miss Mary Hardwick (England) 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

Mme. Sperling (Denmark) beat Miss N. Adamson (Belgium) 6-1, 6-0.

Miss D. Round (England) beat Miss Mary Whitmarsh (England) 6-1, 6-2.

Fri. Marie Horn (Germany) beat Miss Curtis (England) 6-3, 6-3.

Mme. Jedzejowska (Poland) beat Miss Susan Noel (England) 6-1, 4-6, 6-2.

Miss K. Stammers (England) beat Miss Freda James (England) 7-5, 6-2.

Evidence of the consistency of the world's leading amateur tennis players is revealed by the fact that three of the 1935 semi-finalists have reached the same stage this year. Austin (England) is the substitution. Last year Budge beat Austin in the quarter final after the American had started defeat in the face. He went on to be outplayed by Von Cramm.

Of the present semi-finalists only one—Von Cramm—has dropped a set in the course of the four rounds played to date. Perry and Budge have been in irrepressible form and one of the most spectacular matches of a decade is expected when they meet on Wednesday.

Austin's case of accomplishment has been one of the features of the meeting and that he is capable of beating Von Cramm is indisputable. So far as records to hand reveal, Von Cramm and Austin have only met twice in any contest of importance.

Last year in the semi-finals of the French Championship the German beat the Englishman after a wonderful five-set match 6-2, 5-7, 6-1, 5-7, 6-0, while in 1932 Von Cramm defeated Austin in the Davis Cup 6-7, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Perry has last year's Davis Cup victory and some U.S.A. tournament successes over Budge to his credit and because of these must start firm favourite in his quest to-morrow.

Mako And Budge Out Of Wimbledon Doubles

ARE FORCED TO WITHDRAW

London, June 29. The quest of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist to retain the men's doubles title at Wimbledon has been considerably lightened by the withdrawal from the competition to-day of Gene Mako and Donald Budge, the United States champions.

A message from Reuters says that Mako's shoulder is still troubling him and he has scratched from the men's doubles with Budge and from the mixed doubles with Miss Caroline Babcock.

No further news has been received in Hongkong concerning G. P. Hughes who last week had to withdraw from the singles owing to heat strain, but it is possible that he will also refrain from continuing in the doubles with C.R.D. Tuckey in order to save himself for the Davis Cup.

If Hughes decides to continue at Wimbledon, he and Tuckey will constitute the biggest menace to Crawford and Quist.

A Japanese oarsman who rowed in the Oxford University trial eights whilst an undergraduate at Hertford College has secured the acceptance of an agreement with the regatta committee which has enabled him to compete for the Grand Challenge Cup.

Never before has an entry been accepted from Japan. In addition to the Japanese other foreign crews will be competing, and an outstanding regatta is promised. The secretary of the regatta said he understood the Japanese crew would arrive by air from Berlin and would train at Henley. A special boat is being sent from Tokyo.

COLOURS—LIGHT BLUE

Tokio University represents the cream of Japanese rowing. Its colours are light blue, as also are those of Cambridge and Eton. As the men average 10 stone in weight, they are the lightest crew who have ever taken part in a senior event at Henley.

The Oxford oarsman, Mr. Otsuki, rowed for Tokyo University before going to Oxford, and he now holds an official position in the Japanese Bank in London. He will assist Dr. Seta, who is accompanying the crew as coach.

TEST MATCH

SECOND INNS: COLLAPSE

BY ALL-INDIA
CLOSE OF PLAY
80 FOR 7

London, June 29. It was cheerless at Lord's to-day with the skies threatening rain throughout the afternoon.

Although England's outstanding three wickets fell for an additional two runs, leaving All-India with a first innings lead of 13, the visitors found themselves in a serious position when bad light and rain stopped play shortly after the tea interval.

At ten six wickets had fallen for 59 runs. In the third over after the adjournment Khan snicked a ball from Verity for Duckworth to hold (64-7-13).

The light was rapidly falling and play was held up for ten minutes to be resumed for one over, after which stumps were drawn for the day with All-India's second innings score at 80 for 7.

Present scores read.
All India 147 and 80 for 7

K.C.C. SECOND STRING LOSE

To Club Colleagues
CLARK & MRS. KEW IN FORM

Both K.C.C. mixed doubles teams had to introduce reserves when they met in a league match yesterday. G. C. Burnett substituted for Ernie Fincher who is suffering from influenza, while S. A. Gray deputised for A. E. P. Guest who is also under medical orders.

Conditions were somewhat distressing, a sharp shower falling during the match which added greenness to an already soft surface. A brisk breeze was a further disconcerting factor and in view of these disadvantages the play was creditably high.

K.C.C. (1) were somewhat more extended than the final scores suggest. The second string were finely served by G. Clark and Mrs. McCaw, who not only held Bodiker and Miss Mackenzie to a draw but took a set from Burnett and Miss Griffiths.

Gray and Mrs. Kew all but snatched half a set from E. C. Fincher and Miss Dalziel, the losers holding two game points on Miss Dalziel's service for six-all. But they could not consolidate the advantage.

E. C. Fincher and Miss Dalziel ("A") beat Clarke and Mrs. McCaw 6-2; beat S. A. Gray and Mrs. Kew 7-5; beat C. E. Watson and Miss Engel 6-3.

G. Bodiker and Miss Mackenzie ("A") drew with Clarke and McCaw 6-6; beat Gray and Kew 6-3; beat Watson and Engel 6-2.

G. C. Burnett and Miss Griffiths ("A") lost to Clarke and McCaw 2-6; and Engel 6-0.

CANTAB'S AMAZING RUNNING

QUARTER-MILE IN 49.1, HALF IN 1.56

AND EQUALS SPRINT RECORD

(By Fred Dartnell)

A. G. K. Brown was in devastating form for Cambridge University in their annual athletic match with the A.A.A. at Fenners Ground, Cambridge, which resulted in a victory for the A.A.A. by a single point—70½ points to 69½.

Brown commenced his activities by winning the 100 yards in 9.7sec. to equal the British record established by Eric Liddell at Stamford Bridge 13 years ago. A quarter-mile in 49.1sec. was his next achievement, and he wound up his competitive work for the Light Blues by leading the way home in the half-mile in 1min. 56sec.

The Cambridge secretary is probably the most versatile runner of the day. Thirty years ago these times would have been regarded almost as superhuman. Brown won each time without turning the proverbial hair.

APPETITE FOR EXERTIONS

A following wind may have aided him in the shorter races but what speed and what an insatiable appetite for exertion this Brown displays!

They are speculating at Cambridge as to which event will prove Brown's chief forte. For my part, I think the Quarter is his best distance, but a man with his amazing finish, who can do 9.7sec. for the 100 yards, ought to get some astonishing figures for the 100 metres (109.3 yards), which is the Olympic distance.

Duncan, of all his competitors, made the best show against the flying Cantab. He did even time in the sprint.

McCabe made a game finish in the Half and lost only by a yard, but

It is more than likely that the whole programme will be abandoned. A restricted lawn bowls championship schedule is also arranged for to-day, the principal sports fixtures being as follows.

Tru Benised Collars on these New Shirts

TRUBENISING is a new scientific process which makes a soft collar look starched without stiffening the fabric. A collar so treated will retain its neat appearance for the life of the shirt; and it will have a long-wearing life because TRUBENISING does not shorten the life of collars as does starch.

A TRUBENISED collar provides immaculate grooming without stiffness or discomfort. It is porous and absorbent like any soft collar; but it will not crush, wrinkle, or buckle in wear. It will not develop rough edges and will not blister or wilt—like a starched collar—from water or perspiration.

CHAPTER I

"PAINLESS DOC" PENNINGTON, and his assistant, Roy Banks, had taken Horace Greedy's advice. In fact, the overland stagecoach, in which they were bound for the Indian Territory of the West, would be reaching New York in two days! And that wasn't sparring the horses!

There was a rumour of another heavyweight wrestling match at Madison Square Garden, which explained, somewhat, why the westbound stagecoach was a bit crowded of a New Jersey afternoon—that, and the fact that there was a gold rush in California. So, as the stagecoachers phrased it, it was "Westward Ho!" In truth, it was "Ho-ho-ho!" because there was more rush than gold.

From their upper berth, with their stockings feet dangling in and out of the heads of the men below, Doc and Roy were listening to the conversation of the excited group in the coach.

"It won't be many weeks before we're in California," said one of the passengers.

"There'll be gold in them thar hills," croaked another old prospective prospector.

But Doc and Roy weren't interested in the gold in them thar hills. It was the gold in them thar cavities which they were thinking about. Yes, sir, if there was gold in them, they'd take it out; if there wasn't, they'd put it in. They were dentists in the true sense of the word.

They hadn't been in the profession very long. But their apprenticeship of twelve years in the plumbing business served them well. Two years! And not once had they forgotten to forget their tool case!

As they rode along, to the boys it seemed like only day before yesterday that they had exchanged their pliers for the forceps. It should have seemed like that, because it was only the day before yesterday.

In those days Doc was known as Ewald "Double-or-nothing" Jones. How he became "Painless Doc" Pennington was another story.

One day, the two washboard wrestlers had just put the finishing touches on a dental sink for Doctor Philip Pennington, New York painless dentist. And those finishing touches finished the sink all right. In fact, it was sunk. But so was old Doctor P. He couldn't pay the boys for the repairs they had made. To say nothing about the destruction they had made.

Whereupon Ewald helped himself to a half dozen forceps, cooked his ubiquitous cigar to 45° N by E, and shouted, "Double or nothing!"

A coin was flipped and Pennington lost. "Double or nothing!" again was the cry; and again the filling flicker lost. This time he lost his drilling machine. The game went on and on—By the time the sun went down, Ewald and Roy, the bathroom hustlers, had "double" or "nothinged" the dentist out of all his equipment, from the chair, right down through the pivot teeth and the college diploma.

And that was the moment when Ewald and Roy were graduated from plumbing to dentistry. From that hour hence, Ewald was to be known as "Painless Doc" Pennington; and Roy, his first assistant.

But as Roy observed at the time, they couldn't practice in New York. Everybody knew them there. So, they decided to go West—to the vast Indian Territory.

Carefully packing the dental supplies on the top of the stage, they settled themselves in the coach among the future Bronx cowboys and the Brooklyn cactus pickers. And with a "Yippee!" and a "Yowho!" they were off.

Four days out of Newark, somewhere in the wilds of Pennsylvania, the stagecoach hit a rock in what was commonly called a road in the Key-stone State. Doc thought it was the same State. Doc thought it was the same State. When the dust cleared away, Doc and Roy discovered six faces they hadn't seen thus far on the journey.

Among this new half dozen was a pretty little miss who stood out like ginger Rogers in an Old Folks Home.

One look at her, and Roy and Doc were ready to quit the dentist business and go straight.

They would have, if the girl hadn't opened her lunch box and started to eat a rosy red apple. This opened Doc's professional eyes even further—he hadn't eaten in two days, himself.

"My dear little girl," he addressed her. "If you eat that way, you won't have a tooth in your head in a week!"

"She knows how to eat an apple!" Roy cut in. He was always one to save a lady in distress—or at least, it made no difference.

Doc glared at his assistant. "Yes. But does she know the difference between an apple and a pear? Miss, you can pare an apple but you can't apple a pear! For instance—it takes two apples to make a pair, but only one pear to make a—"

Doc was really wound up in the fruit and tooth business. And it required two weeks and three States to get him unwound. As they bounced through Ohio, the Ohioans were oblivious to him—they never even heard him. But that was all right with Doc. He'd never heard of Ohio town was all extra. "That's where the tall corn grows!" As they reached the Missouri River, Doc was still going strong.

— and always bite an apple from right to left. It's an old dental maxim—poetical, but true. It dates back to Adam. And of course you all know about Adam's apple."

At this point, Doc paused for breath. The temporary silence awakened Roy who had been asleep since Pittsburgh. "Aw, gee Doc!" the assistant molar molder protested, "why don't you give these people a rest!" Then he added shyly, "Particularly this young lady!"

Four days of silence passed within the stagecoach. Roy was trying to think how to start talking to this prairie flower. It was evident that Roy was a long, if not a deep, thinker. Finally, he gently cleared his throat. The farmers in the neighbourhood thought another dust storm was coming up. Then he opened up a flowing barrage of oratory.

"Hello," he said.

"Hello," the girl replied. "Say! I didn't tell you to make a speech."

"What's your name?" Roy asked the girl, with a leer at Doc.

"Mary Blake."

"Mary Blake! Gee, what a pretty name. Mine's Roy Banks. Where are you going?"

"Out to the Indian Territory. I've got a job teaching school out there."

"The Indian Territory!" Roy was delighted. "That's where we're going. To Little Town."

"Little Town?" Mary, the school marm, exclaimed. "That's exactly where I'm going."

"Gee!"

"Gee!"

"When?" Doc interjected, just to keep the horse in the right direction. Just as the Dutch spendthrifts had given the Mohawks a string of beads for Manhattan, hoping they'd strangle themselves before they got back to Poughkeepsie, so had the white brother been kind to his red brother in recovery of British Income Tax overpaid, on terms which may be ascertained at any of its Agencies & Branches.

TOULOUSE FACTIONS IN CLASH
180,000 MEN STRIKING

Paris, June 29.
Several were injured to-day in the course of serious rioting in Toulouse, including a Royalist editor, M. Edouard de Carol, during a clash of Rightists and Leftists. Many were arrested.

Police were massed on the boulevards and squares.

Meanwhile, 20,000 men struck in the Moselle Valley plants, raising the total of strikers to 180,000, most of them in the Grenoble and Metz areas. Metz is deprived of gas, but business and industry are nearly normal in Paris. Bordeaux, Lyons and Montpellier reported settlements in the Riviera hotel strike, for the lock-out weakened when Monte Carlo hotels refused to participate.—United Press.

Robbed Mother To Buy Opium SPENDTHRIFT SON BOUND OVER

A charge of stealing $2 from his 55-year-old widow mother was brought against Lam Chuen-shan, aged 23, a tailor, when he appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning.

Detective-Sergeant J. Hunter stated that at about 6.30 a.m. yesterday, complainant had occasion to go to a chest of drawers in her house at No. 121 Shanghai Street, third floor. She found that $2 was missing and went along to an opium den in Woon-sung Street where she found her son. He admitted taking the money and said he had spent it on opium.

Sergeant Hunter added that complainant had said that her son had given her a lot of trouble. He was a spendthrift and was useless as a son. She thought a term of imprisonment would do him good.

Defendant pleaded that before he took the money he had informed his mother that he wanted to give up the opium habit. He had quarrelled with his mother and had then taken the money. He wandered out of the house and did not know where he was going. His worship remarked that defendant could not get rid of the opium habit in an opium den. He said he would give defendant a chance and bound him over in the sum of $50 to be of good behaviour for one year.

Mussolini's Daughter Gravely ill

Rome, June 29.
Signor Benito Mussolini, the Italian Dictator, has gone to the bedside of his youngest daughter, Anna Maria, six years of age. She has been ill for a long time at a country villa, near Rome.

It is rumoured that the child's illness is spinal meningitis.

The whole of Il Duce's family is gathered at the villa.

The condition of the child this evening is better, and no anxiety is now felt.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

RIFLEMAN LACKS LICENCE
TWO MOTORING OFFENCES

Rifleman F. T. McLenon, of the Royal Ulster Rifles, was summoned before Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, for driving private car No. 1240 without an appropriate driving licence at Hennessy Road at 10.30 p.m. on June 13, and for having no front lights.

A. W. Hayward, the registered owner of the same car, was also summoned for having allowed an unlicensed driver, Rifleman McLenon to drive.

McLenon admitted the first summons and was fined $10, and on the summons of driving without front lights he was fined $3. Defendant said something was wrong with his battery.

Traffic Sergeant Young said the lights were switched on after he stopped the car. The battery apparently had run down.

A representative for A. W. Hayward said cars were hired from Dodd's garage in Ice House Street, but in this case the car was hired from the garage in Russell Street where there was no European, and there had been some mistake.

A fine of $5 was imposed.

EXCURSION MISHAP

London, June 29.
A holiday steamer from the Isle of Man, when approaching Dublin on a day's excursion, struck Devil's Rock during a dense fog and although damaged was refloated without assistance.—British Wireless.

CHINESE BEAT JAPANESE
ANOTHER INCIDENT IN NORTH CHINA

Peiping, June 30.
Still another Sino-Japanese incident is reported, this time from Fengtai, and authorities forecast a protest and demands from Japan as a consequence.

Japanese sources report that yesterday a Japanese and Korean, visiting Fengtai, were set upon by some of General Sung Cheh-yuan's soldiers.

The Japanese was manhandled and held prisoner for some considerable time, while the Korean took to his heels and escaped the soldiery.—Reuter.

Peiping Brawl

Peiping, June 30.
The head of the Japanese Hospital here, testifying yesterday in the case of the Japanese officer, Kikaku Sasaki, of the Manchukuo Department of Defence, who was allegedly killed in a fight with British soldiers here, said it was his opinion that the fracture of Sasaki's skull was caused by some blunt instrument and could not have been inflicted by a naked fist.

A Japanese shop-keeper, a friend of Sasaki's said that he was going home on the night Sasaki was fatally hurt, when he heard a cry and saw two British soldiers chase a running man. He thought it was an ordinary street brawl and so continued on his way.

Later, Sasaki arrived outside his home in a rickshaw, groaning, and accompanied by a Japanese friend. Witness advised the friend to take Sasaki to hospital, and Sasaki died shortly after his arrival there.—Reuter.

Two British soldiers, H. Cooke and R. Hunt were examined several days ago for alleged participation in disturbances on the night of May 20, at a cabaret, when Sasaki was injured.

Han Fu-Chu Remains

Nanking, June 30.
General Han Fu-chu has not resigned, according to official information.

It is learned that he has agreed to cancel his request for a fortnight's leave of absence.—Reuter.

Two British Constables Badly Hurt

Jerusalem, June 29.
Three British constables were wounded, two of them seriously, when a police patrol, mounted on a trolley and guarding the railway from Afale to Beisan, was twice ambushed last night.

The first attack the constables repulsed, but in the second, near Beisan, they met with a very heavy fire and retreated with determination.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

REASSURING VIEW

London, June 29.
A more reassuring view of the Transjordan situation is now taken in Whitehall, and the Government has every confidence that the Emir Abdullah will maintain control of his subjects and that threatened trouble there among the Arabs will be averted.—Reuter Special.
